Transit Co. Asks 2-Cent Fare Boost In Maryland

By V. R. Montanari
Post Reporter

The Capital Transit Co. yesterday asked for an "emergency" fare increase of 2 cents a zone on its Maryland lines, and announced it is dismissing about 140 employes this week and during January.

Both moves were attributed by company officials to the recent arbitration board award, which granted drivers and maintenance employes a wage increase of 10 cents an hour. A July, 1948, wage increase also was cited.

The company's request to the Maryland Public Service Commission yesterday for an increase from the present 5 cents per zone to 7 cents was "preliminary to an application to the Public Utilities Commission for an adjustment in the District of Columbia," the company said.

Mum on D. C. Increase

Officials would not say whether the amount of the fare increase requested for the Maryland lines was any indication of the amount to the asked for in the District.

However, Vice President E. C. Giddings said the Maryland fare rise, if obtained, and the savings from dismissal of 140 employes, would "cushion" the "fare increase we will have to ask in the District." The recent award cost the company an estimated $1,100,000 a year.

The Maryland fare increases would apply to each of the present zones, which are about 1½ miles in length, on the 20 lines operated by Capital Transit in Montgomery and Prince Georges Counties.

The increase would add about $485,990 to the present estimated annual operating revenues of $1,233,221 in Maryland, according to company figures. These are based on a total of 24,299,566 riders a year on the lines.

Revenues from Maryland operations failed to cover costs there by some $654,537 a year before the arbitration award, the company said, and the wage increase would make the loss figure $713,426.

Loss Estimated at $227,000

Thus, even if the fare increase is granted by the Public Service Commission, the Maryland operations will continue to result in a loss, estimated at about $227,000 a year, company officials said.

The company's petition to the PSC was in three parts. Along with its request for "emergency" or immediate fare increases, a supplemental tariff was also filed.

Under Maryland procedure, the new fares in the tariff would become effective in 30 days, or on January 29, unless the PSC suspends the tariff and sets a public

Argentina Levies $10 Million Fine For Tax Evasion

Buenos Aires, Dec. 29 (AP).—Heirs of Otto Bemberg, who left a fabulous fortune when he died in Paris in 1932, were ordered by an Argentine court today to pay $10,806,363 fine for evasion of inheritance taxes.

A tax of 16 million dollars was paid by the heirs last year. President Peron once said Bemberg's industrial empire might total 250 million dollars.

Bemberg left breweries, textile factories, finance companies, vast land holdings and a grain business. The bulk of his holdings he turned over to his children abroad while he was still living.

The heirs contended—and Argentine courts have respected the claim—that under the law at the time these were tax-free gifts.

Administration Offers Business Reassurance

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

The Administration gave assurance yesterday that the business community and the system of free enterprise have nothing to fear from the Fair Deal.

The pledge of amity came in the 11,000-word fourth annual report of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, titled "Government and Business." The document, known to have been carefully cleared by the White House, amounted to a statement of the philosophy underlying the Fair Deal's economic principles.

Its attitude and point of view are far removed from those of 10 years ago, in the halcyon days of the New Deal. The fire-breathing, dragon-slaying approach to business is replaced by a concept of government in the role of facilitating and promoting business expansion and welfare.

The report was prepared and signed by the two present members of the council, Leon H. Keyserling, acting chairman, and John D. Clark. The third member of the council and former chairman was Edwin C. Nourse, who resigned last fall.

With one exception, however, the report could have been signed by Nourse, always portrayed as the most conservative member of the "Three Wise Men." In fact, there

Congress Will Hear Truman Wednesday on State of Union

President Truman will appear before a joint session of Congress Wednesday to deliver his State of the Union message, it was announced at the White House yesterday.

Press Secretary Charles G. Ross said that Mr. Truman would mount the dais in the House of Representatives at about 12:30 p. m. He estimated that delivery of the message would take from 35 to 40 minutes.

The day was selected after Mr. Truman had talked on the telephone to the Big Four of Congress—Vice President Barkley, Speaker Rayburn, Senate Leader Lucas and House Leader McCormack. Barkley was the only one of the four in Washington. The Chief Executive talked to Rayburn in Texas, Lucas in Illinois, and McCormack in Massachusetts.

Secretary Ross said that Mr. Truman probably would send his economic report to Congress on Friday and his budget message on Monday, January 9. He emphasized, however, that these dates were subject to change.

In his State of the Union message on Wednesday, the President will ask Congress to press forward on the remainder of his Fair Deal program. A year ago, when he first outlined that program following the 1948 election, he was applauded lustily by the new Democratic majorities. He was, that is, until he asked for an increase in taxes, a request that was followed by a dead silence.

The prospect is that a similar request this time would bring the same kind of reaction.

Mr. Truman plans to meet with his Cabinet officers today and probably will discuss with them his three forthcoming messages to Congress.

Anti-Arthritis Factor in Acth Now Isolated

Chemical Production, Should Be Easy, Science Convention Told

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

New York, Dec. 29.—A California biochemist has isolated the anti-arthritis factor of acth, miracle-working gland extract, it was reported here today.

The isolated factor, moreover, is so simple in comparison to the highly complex acth that it should be "relatively easy" to produce it chemically, and end the bottleneck of present scant supply, a doctor co-worker said.

The reports, among many dealing with research on the new anti-arthritis compounds, cortisone and acth, were presented before scientists attending the 116th annual meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science at Hotel Statler here.

Report of the breakdown of acth to its wonder-working anti-arthritis constituent was prepared by Dr. Choh Hao-li, Chinese-born biochemist of the University of California. Now visiting the Biokemiska Institutionen, Uppsala, Sweden, Dr. Li was not present to discuss his accomplishment.

His co-worker, Dr. Laurence W. Kinsell, associate clinical professor of medicine at the University of California Medical School, explained the process and told of success with the substance on a

'Make-Your-Own' Geiger Counters To Cost About $45

New York, Dec. 29 (NYHT).—Four Geiger counters, all designed so that a high school student can put them together in an afternoon from parts picked up at a radio supply store, were revealed today by the U. S. Atomic Energy Commission at a session of the American Association for the Advancement of Science meeting.

The simple gadgets, which are expected to give students first-hand knowledge of the fundamentals of atomic energy, detect radiation almost as well as precision laboratory models and the portable sets used for uranium prospecting. They look like a small home-made radio set, draw power from two flashlight batteries and all the parts can be bought for between $37 and $45.

The diagrams of the make-your-own Geiger counters, which were seen as an apt example of the plea made by the association to arouse interest in science and mobilize "10 million amateur scientists," will be made available to science teachers.

New Eleanor Roosevelt Book Will Be Serialized in Post

(Mrs. Roosevelt sticks to story of miners living in tents. Page 12.)

"This I Remember," a best seller by Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, will be serialized in The Washington Post, starting Sunday, January 8.

Mrs. Roosevelt's frank and sensitive story of her life as the late President's wife will appear in 28 consecutive daily installments.

Mrs. Roosevelt will discuss the book at The Washington Post's Book and Author luncheon next Friday in the Hotel Statler. Also speaking at the luncheon are Walter Karig, author of "Victory in the Pacific," and Morton Thompson, author of "The Cry and the Covenant." Tickets are about sold out.

"This I Remember" has been on the best-seller lists since publication, with sales averaging a thousand copies a day. About 90,000 copies are now in print.

John Gunther described "This I Remember" as "a personal story of fascinating interest, a book of great historical value—by one of the most magnificent women of modern times."

In her earlier book of autobiography, "This Is My Story," Mrs. Roosevelt told the story of herself and family up to the time of the 1924 Democratic convention.

In the story starting Sunday, January 8, the emphasis changes. "It can no longer be just my autobiography," she writes at the beginning of "This I Remember" "most people will be interested primarily in what I may have to tell about my husband."

East Zone Reds Tell Small Parties To Obey 'Or Else'

Berlin, Dec. 29 (AP).—The Communists today took off the velvet gloves of collaboration with minor political parties in East Germany and laid down a decree to "obey or disappear."

The first to feel the whip of discipline were the Liberal Democrats. Five of their members in the Brandenburg Legislature were suspended for "attacking Russian culture" and for harboring "reactionary ideas." One, Erich Baumann, apparently has disappeared.

He and the others are alleged to have criticized prices and quality of goods in the ration-free stores, the way the "people's owned" system is slowly strangling private enterprise and Soviet propaganda in the schools.

Physician Arrested As Mercy Slayer

Goffstown, N. H., Dec. 29 (U.P.).—A prominent physician was arrested on a charge of first-degree murder in the alleged mercy slaying of a cancer patient.

Dr. Herman N. Sander of Canada pleaded innocent and was held for the grand jury. He was accused of injecting air into the veins of Mrs. Abbie C. Borroto, 59, as she lay dying of cancer on December 4.

County Solicitor Craig said the woman died within 10 minutes after the injection, but that death as a result of cancer "might have been a matter of hours."

Alexander Quits Sesqui Leasing Post

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

Paul Alexander last night resigned as executive vice president of the Sesquicentennial's leasing bureau in a letter declaring he had "done absolutely nothing which has any moral or legal taint."

The resignation followed a request that Attorney General J. Howard McGrath have the FBI investigate the 10 percent kickback deal Alexander reportedly had proposed to a contractor.

Alexander said nothing about his stock interest in the National Capital Sesquicentennial Leasing Bureau, Inc.

"Free Enterprise" His Concern

In his letter to the leasing unit, released by the Sesqui Commission, Alexander said he had acted as an individual "concerned with free enterprise" and his activities had nothing to do "with the commission, their grounds or their buildings or the leasing bureau." He said he was resigning because of the embarrassment caused the leasing bureau "for whose individual members I retain the highest confidence and good will."

The request for the FBI probe came from Carter T. Barron, executive vice chairman of the National Capital Sesquicentennial Commission.

In reply, McGrath would only say that the matter would be considered.

The Sesqui's executive committee will also consider the kickback allegation when it meets at 2:30 p. m. today at the Riggs National Bank. Alexander, who last week was charged by a Gaithersburg, Md., contractor, George M. Parker, with making the offer, is expected to give his side of the story at the meeting.

Agent for "Susquetenial"

Parker said he received a written proposal in which Alexander stated he held "a letter of appointment" "as exclusive rental agent for the Susquetenial (Alexander's spelling) Commission created by Congress. There is a total amount of space aggravating (also Alexander's spelling) 10 million dollars and we have agreed to sell it on a 5 percent commission basis or a total of $600,000 gross."

(This was in reference to the 5 percent commission promised the leasing bureau for handling rental of the 12-million-dollars of Sesqui space. In defending the arrangement, Sesqui officials have pointed out that similar fairs in other cities had allowed as much as 19 percent commission to space renters.)

Alexander said he held a fourth of the stock—less one and a half percent—in the National Capital Leasing Bureau, Inc., which has the right to lease exhibit space at the Freedom Fair. He told Parker, the latter said:

"To further along other interest I wish you to advance me $2600 for which the following will be done. I will issue 10 percent of my holdings in the leasing corporation in your name and you can hold the balance of my interest in escroe (Alexander's spelling) until said money is returned or an equivalent return is made.

"I further agree to secure you a contract on one or more of the independent buildings and you agree to pay me 10 percent of the net

Navy Shifts Top Officers; Two Retiring

The Navy last night announced a major reshuffling of its high command affecting 16 of the Nation's top admirals.

Admiral William H. P. Blandy, commander-in-chief of the Atlantic Fleet, will retire February 1 and be replaced by Vice Admiral William M. Fechteler, now deputy chief of naval operations for personnel.

Other shifts will largely replace the top assistants to Adm. Forrest P. Sherman, Chief of Naval Operations, who had been serving under Adm. Louis Denfeld, deposed as CNO, by officers of Sherman's own choosing.

Most of them, however, were due for reassignment and all received important posts at sea.

Another important move sends Vice Admiral Harry W. Hill, now chairman of the general board, to become Superintendent of the Naval Academy. He'll relieve Rear Admiral James L. Holloway, jr., in April.

Holloway, who has been overdue for sea duty, will receive orders as commander of the Atlantic Fleet Cruiser Force.

Shore Billet for Bogan

Vice Admiral Gerald F. Bogan, whose sharp criticism of unification and Pentagon policies helped touch off the congressional row last fall, apparently will be given a less important post than he now holds.

He was ordered detached as commander of the First Task Fleet in the Pacific after only a year in the post and will be given a shore billet, probably commander, Fleet Air, Jacksonville, Fla. The latter job calls only for a rear admiral, which may mean a demotion for Bogan.

Admiral Blandy, who was a leading contender for the post of chief of naval operations, when Denfeld was first named in 1946 and renamed last summer, announced he was retiring for "partial physical disability."

No Mention of Denfeld

No mention was made of another assignment for Denfeld, who is on leave. He is expected to retire. The shift of commands did not affect Admiral Arthur W. Radford, commander-in-chief of the Pacific Fleet, nor Admiral Richard L. Connolly, commander of the Naval Forces in the Eastern Atlantic and Mediterranean.

Another four-star admiral, Thomas C. Kinkaid, will retire as Eastern Sea Frontier Commander May 1. He will be replaced by Vice Adm. Oscar C. Badger, who has been on temporary duty here since returning from command of naval forces in Chinese waters.

Blandy was commander of "Operation Crossroads" which conducted the atomic bomb tests at Bikini in the Marshall Islands in 1946. During World War II, he served in turn as chief of the Ordnance Bureau, commander of a Pacific Fleet amphibious force and commander of Pacific Fleet cruisers and destroyers.

To Strengthen Task Force

More Navy Ships to Far East; Truman Studies Policy on Asia

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

The Navy announced yesterday that it would send a 27,000-ton aircraft carrier and two destroyers to Asiatic waters within two weeks to strengthen the Seventh Task Fleet based on the Philippines.

The news came shortly after President Truman had met with his chief military and foreign affairs advisers to review American policy in the Far East and elsewhere abroad.

The Seventh Task Fleet, the Navy's statement said, "constitutes a mobile task force readily available to support United States policy and to serve as a stabilizing influence in the western Pacific."

The move was not a sudden one; Navy officials said it had been decided on December 6, about the time the Chinese Nationalists were tightening their blockade of Communist-held ports, and just after Consul-General Angus Ward had been freed from a Communist jail at Mukden.

Similarly, Administration sources said the meeting of the President and his advisers was not a "crisis" meeting, but was just a regular semimonthly session of the National Security Council.

Nor did the transfer of warships mean that the Navy would protect American ships running the Chinese Nationalist blockade. The

Tass Links U. S. Aides With Death

London, Dec. 29 (U.P.). — The Soviet news agency Tass reported from Kabul, Afghanistan, today that police have discovered "the corpses of two murdered Afghan citizens" buried beneath an apartment occupied by two employes of the United States.

Tass said there was profound indignation among Kabul's population. Tass said:

"Kabul police have found the corpses of the murdered Afghanistans Mir and Ibni Amir, who had frequently visited the employes of the American Embassy in Kabul, Betty Johnson and Rutfoose, for illegal exchange of Afghan currency for dollars.

"On December 21, Mir and Ibni Amir went to visit the above mentioned employes of the American Embassy carrying Afghan currency and did not return home. On December 23 the police searched the apartment of Betty Johnson and Rutfoose, where the secretary of the American Embassy in Kabul was at that time. As a result of the search, a freshly made hole was found in one of the rooms.

"The corpses of Mir and Abni Amir had been buried in it at a depth of three meters (almost 10 feet)."

Senate Foreign Relations Chairman Tom Connally returned to Washington yesterday and immediately issued a call for continued "nonpartisan" unity in foreign affairs.

Discounting reports of a growing GOP rift on our policies abroad, he nonetheless warned that "disunity or serious division on a political basis . . . greatly weakens our hand."

"The United States can have but one foreign policy," Connally told a large press conference. "We cannot have a Republican foreign policy and also a Democratic foreign policy. That was tried in 1919 with tragic results. . . .

Big French Labor Group Backs Fight Against U. S. Arms

Paris, Dec. 29 (AP).—The Communist-led General Federation of Labor (CGT), France's largest labor organization, voted today to support dock workers who say they won't unload any American arms sent to this country under the military aid program.

The vote was taken at a joint meeting of CGT's 35-man administrative committee and about 150 union chiefs. A resolution given to reporters said the group "decided to hurry action to help them (the dock workers) in their struggle undertaken against the unloading of American arms."

Army Discharges Veteran of 4 Years —At Age of 17

Cumberland, Md., Dec. 19 (U.P.). Richard N. Riggleman was home today for his first holiday season since 1944, after completing a four-year hitch in the Army and being discharged—at the ripe old age of 17.

Three of the four years were spent in Germany. At the time of his discharge, his age was still undetected.

Young Riggleman enlisted in the Army November 21, 1945, at the age of 13. He was a private first class at 14, and was 16 when he made corporal, the rank he held at the time of his discharge.

Hungary Reds Seize Control Of West-Owned Companies

Budapest, Dec. 29 (U.P.).—The Communist government today seized control of almost every foreign company in Hungary—including American and British—in what it said was an effort to end "spy rings" and "sabotage moves."

A sweeping decree ordered nationalization of all industrial firms employing more than 10 persons, a decree that hit hundreds of plants and firms and included Standard Oil and the International Telephone & Telegraph Co.

The decree was ordered after Minister of State Erno Gero, economic boss of the country, charged foreign imperialists used the holdings to build up spy rings and sabotage groups.

Gero mentioned particularly Maort (Hungarian name of Standard Oil) and the Standard Electric Works, a subsidiary of IT&T. Some Standard Oil executives already have been jailed or expelled for alleged sabotage. Three IT&T representatives, including Robert Voegeler of New York, now are in jail on charges of spying.

Joint Soviet-Hungarian companies were exempt. They included the big aviation, shipping and oil concerns.

Ninety-two percent of Hungary's industry already had been nationalized. Practically all the remaining 8 percent—affecting British, American, Swedish, Swiss and Dutch interests—went under state control today.

Robert Hill, acting commercial attache at the American Legation, estimated that between 10 and 15 companies partly or completely owned by American capital were affected. He put their value at "tens of millions of dollars."

23 Captains Promoted; Senate Must Act on Slate

'Operation 23' Head Reported Dropped But Later Restored After Capitol Furore

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

President Truman last night approved a long held up Navy promotion slate listing 23 captains for advancement to rear admiral.

Among the group was Capt. Arleigh A. (Thirty-one Knot) Burke, whose name had been reported removed from the list by top Pentagon officials. Burke headed the now abolished "Op. 23," a Navy unit which allegedly stage-managed the Navy's fight against Defense Department war and unification policies.

However, the fact that the approved list contained one more new rear admiral than the selection board originally was instructed to propose—23 instead of 22—caused renewed speculation that the original reports had been correct and that Captain Burke's name was eliminated and then restored.

Crommelin's Name Missing

Capt. John G. Crommelin, another Navy officer who figured prominently in last fall's uproar over military policies and unification, was not selected for promotion. He was publicly reprimanded just before the selection board met for releasing classified documents critical of Pentagon policies and it was freely predicted that his name would not be recommended.

The promotion list has lain on President Truman's desk for over a month—an unusual procedure. Published reports—never denied—said that the much-decorated Burke was recommended for promotion by the selection board but that on directions "from above" the group reconvened and substituted another officer's name for his.

President Truman denied newspaper accounts that there were two such lists, but subsequent published reports that the list was changed in the Pentagon before reaching him went unchallenged.

There were demands on Capitol Hill that the promotions, which are subject to Senate confirmation, be investigated. Congressmen charged that such "political tampering" with the Navy promotion system would break down morale.

A board of 13 top-ranking admirals recommended the officers for advancement. Those chosen, in the order of their promotion, are:

Capt. Charles Delorma Wheelock, 4801 Connecticut Avenue, deputy chief of the Bureau of Ships.

Capt. Ralph Edward McShane, Portsmouth, N. H., Naval Shipyard.

Capt. Paul Edward Pihl, 3051 N st. nw., now on duty in the Office of Naval Operations.

Seizure of Lands Of Those Fleeing Shanghai Hinted

The leading Communist newspaper in Shanghai has published a decree which appears to foreshadow eventual seizure of lands owned by Americans and other foreigners who have fled the city.

This was disclosed yesterday by the State Department.

The decree provides that Shanghai authorities may seize land which has not yet been registered, or "where there is an agent who cannot satisfy the requirements of the land bureau."

Such land can be taken into "safe keeping" for three years.

During this period, the land can be rented by city authorities or requisitioned by the government. Should the owner get it back, he must agree to abide by whatever leases were made while the land was in "safe keeping."

East Capitol St. Site Favored for Bridge

By Richard Lyons
Post Reporter

The District Commissioners yesterday approved the controversial East Capitol st. for a bridge across the Anacostia River.

First advocated by District highway officials last fall, the proposal will now go for approval to the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, whose staff favors a crossing at Massachusetts ave.

Engineer Commissioner Gordon R. Young, who is also a member of NCPPC, will state the District's case and ask NCPPC concurrence at its next meeting, January 25 to 27. It was on Young's recommendation that the Commissioners acted yesterday.

Action Now Unexplained

The Commissioners gave no reason for their action. It was assumed, however, that funds for the bridge have been included in the District's 1951 budget, and that the Commissioners want a site selected before they go before Congress to ask for funds.

Figures from the Commissioners' budget that will be sent to Congress cannot be revealed. But the Highway Department had asked for $3,560,000 for the "first leg of a bridge over the Anacostia River between East Capitol st. and Massachusetts ave."

Highway officials said no definite plans have been drawn. However, general plans call for a structure with Y-shaped approaches on the west anchor. On the east side of the river the bridge would connect with East Capitol st. The west approaches would be connected to B st. se. and C st. ne.

This, said Young, would fit in with long-range plans to extend Constitution and Independence aves., eastward from the Capitol as part of Federal building development and an East Mall.

Cost of the bridge at East Capitol st. has been estimated from 6 million to 12 million dollars. Young would give no figure yesterday, but said it would be "somewhat more" than one at Massachusetts ave.

An East Capitol st. bridge was also indorsed yesterday by the Washington Board of Trade, for these reasons:

(1) It was supported by a sound survey (Washington metropolitan area transportation study); (2) it would serve four roads instead of the two served by a bridge at Massachusetts ave.; (3) it would afford excellent connections for summer shore traffic; (4) it would stimulate development of the central business district and provide a better distribution of highway facilities throughout the area.

Before yesterday, all talk of where the bridge should go had been carried on at lower levels. District highway officials urged the East Capitol st. site. John Nolen, Jr., director of planning for NCPPC, reported against it and advocated Massachusetts ave. NCPPC in the past has favored a bridge at Massachusetts ave., but has taken no action since East Capitol st. came into the picture.

Supported by Traffic Figures

District officials base their stand chiefly on data from the recently completed Washington Metropolitan Area transportation study which showed that nearly half the traffic crossing the Anacostia is going to or from the area north of Fort Dupont Park. There are now three bridges south of the park, and only one to the north.

East Capitol st. is north of the park; Massachusetts avenue is to the south.

Nolen attacked an East Capitol st. bridge as too costly, said it would interfere with proposed recreation areas at the foot of East Capitol st. and implied the proposal was based on questionable traffic and population assumptions. District officials have pointed out that a Massachusetts ave. bridge would split Gallinger Hospital into two parts.

One side issue was whether the bridge would conflict with plans for the sesquicentennial Freedom Fair at the foot of East Capitol st. Young says it won't.

It was not entirely clear yesterday whether NCPPC approval is legally required on the bridge site. If it involves a change in the highway plan, NCPPC must approve. District officials said they were not sure it is a change.

However, park land is involved, and it was pointed out that NCPPC could advise National Capital Parks not to make the land available if NCPPC disapproves the site. In the event of a deadlock, Congress will have to settle it.

ICC Delays Cut in Rails' Use of Coal

By The Associated Press

The Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday decided against any immediate cut in passenger service on coal-burning railroads as a fuel-conservation measure.

But the agency left the door open by announcing it would resurvey the supply situation again next Tuesday.

Col. J. Monroe Johnson, ICC member, said, "We can get along now for a few more days without any further action."

The ICC already has given railroads a priority on coal supplied by mines along their routes.

Johnson met yesterday with an advisory committee composed of representatives of the ICC, the National Coal Association, and the Association of American Railroads.

He said they had reports that a supply of 30 million tons of coal is above ground to meet the Nation's coal needs.

The commission has been concerned with the coal supply as it relates to railroads because of the three-day work week ordered by John L. Lewis.

Johnson said some railroads have less coal on hand than a week ago, and some have improved their supply situation.

For that reason, he said, no further conservation measures will be taken until the situation is surveyed again next week.

In another view of the coal situation, Senator Morse (R., Oreg.) contended that the three-day mine week ordered by Lewis cannot be halted by President Truman.

Southern coal operators, accusing Lewis of unfair labor practices, on Wednesday asked the National Labor Relations Board to take court action to force a return to full production.

Rightist IUE Wins Election

Newark, N. J., Dec. 29 (AP).—The CIO's new anti-Communist electrical workers union has won the first National Labor Relations Board collective bargaining election for electrical workers in the metropolitan area.

Milton Weihrauch, field director of the CIO-International Union of Electrical Workers (IUE) said employes at Robert Reiner, Inc., Weehawken, voted 219 to 13 in favor of the CIO group over the left-wing United Electrical Workers (UE).

The Reiner shop formerly was represented by Local 448 of the UE, recently ousted from the CIO on charges its leadership was too far to the left.

'Save Contract' Cry Wins Election for UE

Elmira, N. Y., Dec. 29 (AP).—Officers who urged "Stick with the UE and protect your contract" were reelected last night by Local 310 of the United Electrical Workers.

The pro-UE slate, headed by Leland Austin, polled 292 votes to 195 for a so-called right wing faction headed by William Hosey.

Local 310 claims to represent 613 employes at the Elmira works of the General Electric Co. and another 65 workers at the Hilliard Corp., machine tool firm.

South Capitol St. Bridge To Be Opened January 12

The new South Capitol Street Bridge will be opened to traffic with a dedication ceremony January 12 at 2 p. m., the District Commissioners announced yesterday.

Assistant Engineer Commissioner L. A. Cox and Charles Stofberg, administrative assistant to Commissioner John Russell Young, were instructed to work with Southeast citizens' groups to plan a suitable ceremony.

The Commissioners are seeking a name for the bridge—preferably that of a prominent American—and indicated they would welcome suggestions from the public.

Reassurance Given Business is little in the document that would be challenged by any conservative businessman.

The exception is a declaration of council intent to discuss current economic problems and work cooperatively with Congress on them. This would mean entering into public debate and probably campaigning for Administration policies.

Nourse had always held that this would impair or be inconsistent with the council's confidential advisory relationship to the President.

Any such "problems" as would arise from these added junctions, said Keyserling and Clark, "have been exaggerated."

The report's longest section, in which the council undertook to state what it saw as trends in "Government's attitude toward business," had nothing in it to give substance to widely held businessmen's notions that Keyserling, at least, was "antibusiness," or a "New Deal wild man." On the contrary.

Business Trends

Here is a summary of the trends in Administration belief which he and Clark see, and indorse:

1. The "doctrine of secular stagnation," i. e. the inevitability of depression in business cycles, is out. It has been replaced by "the firm conviction that our business system and with it our whole economy can and should continue to grow."

2. Efforts to "redistribute" the income are less significant as economic policy than efforts to promote expansion of the total income and national product. In other words, first priority in Government policy is to make a bigger pie, not to devise ways of cutting the present one.

3. The problem of distributing income should be considered as an economic one as much as a social one. Social principles and considerations will never effect a successful agreement on how to share the wealth. The problem, then, must be viewed from the question of what distribution makes most economic sense, and best furthers the goal of a "balanced," expanding economy.

The council concludes that this goal is best served by expanding "consumption opportunities" at a more rapid rate than investment. In other words, the council prescribes a faster enlargement of purchasing power than of accumulations for investment.

4. There is a mutuality of interest among all economic groups, and the provision of fair farm prices, the lifting of low living standards, provision of adequate business investment funds and profits, and meeting domestic welfare needs are not incompatible. The implication is that the theory of inevitable conflict between different economic groups has been abandoned.

5. "Bigness" in business, as such, is not evil. There is room for both big business and small. Small business is threatened not so much by the big "trusts" as by instability in the economy.

6. The attitude of Government is moving "away from the purely negative or policing function and toward the affirmative or facilitative approach." Thus, fiscal, credit, monetary and other policies to help business expand "are at least as important as the more traditional watchdog functions."

7. Specific controls do not answer the basic needs confronting the American economy. Possibly there should be measures for imposing controls to be held in reserve. But for the foreseeable future, Government decrees on the business community are not the best method.

8. The trend in Government thinking—and this is seen as the most important of all—is moving away from reliance on "compensatory" Government action to counter economic fluctuations. That is, heavy Federal spending to prevent a depression and curtailment to prevent an inflation is not the whole answer.

Consensatory action can help iron out minor fluctuations and "must indeed be used when big ones develop," but the real answer to a bad depression must come from a revival of private investment. Thus, the so-called "Keynesion" economics—the council thinks this a misnomer, and misappreciation of what Lord Keynes believed—is not representative of Government thinking, as it once certainly was.

The council takes almost as equally cheerful a view of the change in business attitude toward Government.

"We discern a trend (in business attitude) which is distinctly propitious to mutual accommodation and adjustment," the report says.

The report, which precedes by a week and does not cover the same ground as the council's Economic Review, refrains from giving any intimation of specific economic policy to be recommended to the Congress and the country.

There is one exception. The report argues at some length for the need of a uniform social security policy, to minimize or prevent a harvest of haphazard and inconsistent private pension schemes.

The council recommends expansion of a Federal system for old-age security, since it feels the economic considerations involved affect the whole economy and should rest with a national agency, not a multitude of private ones.

The major recommendation made in the report on general Federal policy is for more stability. It asks that Government economic policy be considered on a longer range basis than at present, and be grounded on the assumption that the economy will have continued upward expansion.

At the same time, the report points out, there should be more consistency of various Federal economic policies, by appraising each in some "unifying framework." This would not be "central planning" or "blueprinting the economy," but simply good management practice.

Two-Cent Md. Fare Hike Asked

hearing on it. However, the company also asked for less than 30 days' notice for the fare increase. These are both alternatives to the petition for "emergency" action.

The company declared that continuation of present fares in Maryland without relief will not only "impair the ability of the company to render service in Maryland," but also have a serious effect on its ability to give adequate service on its entire system.

Vice President Giddings said this would be the first fare increase in Montgomery County lines since the zone system was established there several years ago, although a pass system was eliminated in 1947.

In Prince Georges, he said, some lines were rerouted in 1947, which had the effect of raising some fares and lowering others.

Increase of Eight Cents

The maximum number of zones in any of the Maryland lines is four, so that for the longest ride the fare would increase from 20 cents to 28 cents.

Bus lines in Maryland account for 19,020,154 rides per year, and a deficit of $676,918 under the new wage scales, according to Capital Transit figures, while the streetcar lines are carrying some 5,279,412 annually and losing $36,508 a year, the company declared.

In the announcement of the discharge of 140 employes for economy, company officials said the largest number of those dismissed, 100, are in the mechanical department. About 20 are in the maintenance of way department, while the rest are clerical employes.

The transit company also announced that, effective January 15, the information department, which answers phone queries on streetcar and bus routes and schedules, will be open from 8 a. m. to 6 p. m., instead of maintaining the present hours of from 7 a. m. to midnight.

Savings Not Known

There was no estimate given on the amount which will be saved by the discharges, which involve regular employes.

A company official also confirmed that about 60 men are being retired on pensions. Almost all of these are men who are past the pension age of 65 but who wanted to continue working.

The minimum pension is $50 a month, in addition to Social Security benefits, for those of retirement age, who have been with the company 25 years.

Company and employe contribute to the retirement fund an equal percentage of the employe's pay up to $3000 a year. Above $3000, the employe contributes twice as much as the company.

Radio-Video Strike Threat Off for Month

New York, Dec. 29 (AP).—The threat of a radio and television strike against four major networks at midnight Saturday was averted today for at least a month.

Frederick H. Bullen, executive secretary of the State Board of Mediation, announced that the networks and the AFL Radio and Television Directors Guild had agreed to continue negotiations and program operations until January 31. The contract expires Saturday midnight.

Baruch Calls For Higher Old-Age Pay

Georgetown, S. C., Dec. 29. (AP). Bernard M. Baruch called today for higher old age insurance payments and an end to "inflationary policies" as protection for the Nation's aged.

The 79-year-old adviser to Presidents told Editor Walker Stone of the Scripps-Howard Newspaper Alliance that the constantly increasing life expectancy of Americans gives this county "its big opportunity of the next half-century."

"No previous civilization has ever enjoyed such a maturing, healthy population," Baruch said in a copyrighted interview. "How wonderful an asset if properly used! How tragic a liability if abused!"

Hard to Change Jobs

The famed financier criticized the trend toward privately-financed pension plans. He said they make it hard for workers to change jobs, tend to encourage retirement at too early an age, and discourage the hiring of middle-aged men.

"Too many of the things being tried today," he said, "are stopgap, piecemeal measures. There is no over-all pattern to guide people.

"Some of the things being done may cause more harm than good, especially if there are private pensions only for the strong.

"How about all the others who pay by taxes or higher prices for the strong?"

With the increasing longevity of Americans, Baruch said, the retirement age should be set at a higher level.

"Shouldn't the Social Security law be studied," he asked, "to see how it can be changed so men and women can continue working after 65 and thereby accumulate larger pensions?"

He acknowledged that the cost of such a step "is the nub of the whole problem."

Being "Shortchanged"

Baruch noted that mounting living costs have cut the ground from under people who had saved for their old age, or had expected to retire on pension.

"The workers who paid in their taxes or savings expecting pensions when they retired are now being shortchanged," he said. "The level of old-age insurance payments will now have to be raised.

"But what good will that be unless inflationary policies are halted and 'me-too' pressure groups fought off?

"Anything that saps the value of savings—and inflation is the worst single threat—is the enemy of the aged and of those who expect to grow old."

Crowds Make Churchill Delay Ship's Sailing

Southampton, England, Dec. 29 (U.P.).—Winston Churchill, notorious for being late for trains, today held up the ship taking him to a vacation in the Madeira Islands.

The vessel, the Durban Castle, was delayed nearly a quarter of an hour to allow Churchill and his wife to embark on a two-week holiday cruise.

Churchill had a good excuse, however. Residents of Southampton recognized his car as it sped to the boat and thousands jammed the roads to cheer him.

Doughton Sees No Tax Boost

Representative Robert L. Doughton (D., N. C.) said yesterday there is little chance for any tax increase which President Truman may ask of Congress when it reconvenes next week.

The chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, where all tax laws originate, held out the prospect instead that the coming session might cut Federal excise levies.

There is no guarantee Mr. Truman will ask for higher taxes, but he has said many times he knows of no other way to bring the Government out of the red. His plans may be disclosed, however, in the State of the Union message he will deliver personally to a joint session of the Senate and House next Wednesday.

Since taxes will be one of the hot issues of the coming session, Doughton was asked about his views on his return from a two-month vacation.

He said he found the people back home "clamoring for economy in Government and tax relief."

"There wasn't much sentiment for tax increases when Congress adjourned—in fact, there was a lot of opposition," he recalled. "I shall still keep on insisting that we cut expenses. Some economies in foreign spending may be possible."

He said Congress also should try to balance the budget by plugging loopholes in the collection laws and going after evaders. Some experts believe the Government is losing five billion dollars a year through loopholes and evasions. The deficit for the present fiscal year is estimated at about 5½ billion dollars.

"If the Government collected every dollar owed it under present law, it is my opinion it could just about balance the budget," Doughton said.

Red Efforts to Land On Hainan Smashed

Ouster Asked

U. N. Ignores Red Demand On China

Lake Success, Dec. 29 (NYHT).—The Soviet Union today repeated in the United Nations—this time in the Security Council—its attack on delegates from Nationalist China and demanded, in effect, they be ousted in favor of representatives of Communist China.

The Russian outburst came as no surprise at the start of a Council meeting on the India-Pakistan dispute over Kashmir. It was voiced by Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Vakob Malik, who said his country no longer recognized the Nationalist delegates as representatives of the Chinese people.

The irony was, however, that Dr. Tingfu F. Tsiang, the Chinese delegate, will under the alphabetical rule of rotation be Council president for January and, unless the Russians back up their threats by silence or a boycott, they will have to ask Dr. Tsiang for permission to speak to denounce him again all next month.

The Council took no cognizance of the Russian demands and held no debate on it.

The Council then took up Kashmir. A U. N. plebiscite is suposed to be held there to determine whether it wants to join India or Pakistan, but the arrangements have been delayed because the two cannot agree on terms of demilitarizing their sectors of Kashmir.

The Council president, Gen. Andrew G. L. McNaughton of Canada, reported on the results of his efforts to carry out a Council assignment of individual mediation to bring India and Pakistan into agreement.

He reported he had suggested a demilitarization plan to the Indian and Pakistani delegates here, but that slow communications from Lake Success to Karachi and New Delhi prevented receipt of their replies until a few hours before the Council meeting.

General McNaughton did not make the replies public. It was learned privately they showed no short road to agreement.

Council must solve the problem, and in two days time, Canada, along with the Ukraine and Argentina, ceased to be a member of the Council. They are to be replaced by India, Equador and Yugoslavia.

It was decided that General McNaughton would continue his mediation efforts legally up to Saturday midnight—the expiration of Canada's term. He will report back to the new Council at its first session and it will decide whether he is to carry on his efforts as a sort of private agent of the Council.

Hongkong, Dec. 29 (AP).—Several Communist landing attempts on the island of Hainan have been smashed by coast artillery, Chinese Nationalist military sources reported today.

These small-scale operations were described as feeling-out preparations for a future major assault on the big island which lies only 10 miles off the southern mainland of China.

Simultaneously, the Communists were reported reinforcing the pro-Red guerillas who for years have roamed the interior of the island.

Foreign military sources in Hongkong said small parties of Communist troops already were landing secretly on Hainan and vanishing into the interior.

The Nationalists fear that the guerillas will seize beachheads to facilitate the main amphibious attack which they anticipate. The Nationalists guess total guerilla strength now at 20,000 to 50,000 men.

Gen. Hsueh Yueh, commanding Hainan, was stated by Chinese papers to be trying to get reinforcements from Formosa, the other big Nationalist island. He already has a garrison of about 200,000 men, mostly refugees from Nationalist armies that disintegrated on the mainland.

Other Nationalist remnants were reported still crossing into Indo-China. The French have said they are disarming and interning these troops, but unconfirmed Chinese press dispatches said 25,000 of them had gone into Viet-Namese rebel territory, retaining their weapons.

Pravda Says U. S. Readies Bacteria War

Moscow, Dec. 29 (AP).—Russians were told today the United States is preparing for bacteriological warfare, while also harboring Japanese charged in a Soviet indictment with actually carrying on a German assault against Chinese.

Pravda, Communist Party organ, in reporting the Siberian war crimes trial of 12 Japanese army officers at Khabarovsk, said the United States is maintaining a bacteriological warfare experiment station near Washington.

(The United States Government disclosed in 1946 it was interested in biological warfare. The late James Forrestal, then Secretary of Defense, in a 1200-word report last March, described germ warfare as a great potential weapon of the future, but sought to allay "the public's exaggerated impression" that germ warfare is a superweapon capable of wiping out multitudes of people.

(Forrestal disclosed the military's work on biological warfare is being done at Camp Detrick, Md. The report said the project is concerned both with building a defense against an enemy's use of germs and developing a similar weapon for offense if the need arises. Use of Camp Detrick as a bacterial warfare research laboratory was started during World War II.)

Pravda accused the United States of:

1. "Deliberately protecting Japanese war criminals," such as Gen. Shiro Ishii, who, the paper said, headed the Japanese bacteriological warfare organization.
2. Remilitarizing Japan in violation of the Potsdam decisions.
3. Placing in high positions "Japanese of the character of those on trial at Khabarovsk."
4. Transforming Japan into its principal military base in the Far East.

The Moscow radio reported the 12 on trial had infected 3000 Chinese war prisoners with typhoid fever in 1942 and then released them to start an epidemic among civilians. All 12 defendants are reported to have pleaded guilty to developing germ warfare before and during World War II.

Two Indicted For Hindering Trial of Bridges

San Francisco, Dec. 29 (AP).—The Federal grand jury indicted two women today on charges of obstructing the Harry Bridges perjury trial.

Both were specifically accused of conspiracy to influence Mervin Rathborne, once a close associate of the CIO leader and a prospective Government witness in his trial here.

Mrs. Jean Simons Murray, identified as secretary of the Alameda County CIO Council, was arrested shortly after the secret indictment was returned before United States District Judge Michael J. Roche.

The second woman named as Betty Magruder, was not taken into custody immediately.

Mrs. Murray told newsmen she knew several witnesses in the Bridges case but denied she had tried to influence any of them.

"I just talked to them as human beings," she said.

The Bridges trial is in recess until next Tuesday. Bridges is accused of perjuring himself in denying at a 1945 naturalization hearing that he was a Communist.

Uranium-Rich Congo Periled By Reds, Belgian Report Says

Brussels, Dec. 29 (U.P.).—A top-secret official report has warned the government that Soviet infiltration into the interior of Africa is an imminent threat to the security of the uranium-rich Belgian Congo, it was disclosed tonight.

Agents employed in the Soviet network have set up an espionage center near the mines from which the United States gets its uranium ore, it was asserted.

The report was made to the Belgian State Security Bureau by one of its officers after a three-month investigation on the spot.

A precaution recommended is a 24-hour-a-day patrol of the Congo River between Brazzaville, capital of French Equatorial Africa, and Leopoldville, capital of the Belgian Congo, to stop a steady stream of illegal infiltration.

The report asserted that as part of the Soviet network the following agencies are maintained:

1. An agitation and propaganda headquarters at Brazzaville, where Russia has a staff of seven.
2. A military and economic intelligence center directed by a staff of 27 Soviet consular agents at Pretoria, South Africa.
3. A headquarters for sabotage and for arming natives at Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, where Russia is said to maintain an embassy staff of 120, in addition to a "medical" mission of 400.

The report asserts that 60 Belgian Congo natives were taken to Moscow and given courses that fitted in with native witchcraft. Fifty-seven of the 60 returned to tell the natives the "white suppressors" are to be ousted and old tribal customs restored, the report says.

The report says also that recent disorders in British Kenya were instigated by Soviet sabotage agents.

Was Her Coronation Fixed?

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

Starlet Colleen Townsend places crown on LaDene Van Wagoner

Coral Gables, Fla., Dec. 29 (U.P.).—There was no fury anywhere tonight like that of 37 scorned contestants for the glamour title "Queen of the Orange Bowl."

Cries of "fix" rose from pretty throats. A mass meeting of losers was scheduled to frame a complaint. There were threats of damage suits.

The queen, lovely La Dene Van Wagoner, 23, of Salt Lake City was crowned last night in a sprinkle of rain and a full hurricane of protest from the 37 also-rans who said it was terrible that they should get their feet wet when everybody knew Utah had copped the prize.

Everybody knew, they said, except La Dene, a slender, blond airlines hostess.

"Nobody told me," she said. "I was amazed."

A poll of the "princesses" who lost showed that most of them had heard rumors for days and even weeks that Miss Van Wagoner would win.

"But I thought I still had a chance," said Bernice Feeney, who came closer than most, having made the court of honor.

"Why, up on the balcony before we went down into one patio for the ceremonies, I heard another girl congratulate Miss Van Wagoner," said Cathie Blakely. "And she answered: 'Thanks for not saying anything.'"

"I didn't say that," said Miss Van Wagoner. "I said: 'It's news to me.'"

Rocket Plane Speed Reports False, AF Says

By The Associated Press

The Air Force said last night that "recent reports of specific speeds" attained by the rocket plane X-1 are incorrect.

The Los Angeles Times' aviation editor, Marvin Miles, said yesterday that the plane had flown 1989 miles an hour—three times the speed of sound.

Before the Air Force issued its statement last night, military and aviation experts here said they had not been informed of any 1989-mile-an-hour flight. They said they regarded such a speed as possible, but questioned whether the X-1 had been capable of doubling its top speed in the relatively short time since it was reported to have flown 964 miles an hour. Sound travels 663 miles an hour between the altitudes of 35,000 and 100,000 feet.

Handel's 'Messiah' 1st Edition Found In Johnstown, Pa.

Johnstown, Pa., Dec. 29 (AP).—A first edition of Handel's famous Christmas oratorio, "The Messiah," has been discovered in the Johnstown Library, where it went unnoticed for 10 years. It is said to be the only known first edition in the United States.

David Griffith, 27-year-old library science student, who made the find, said the discovery has been substantiated by the Library of Congress and by William Smith of London, Handel biographer.

Heretofore, Griffith said, the 1767 editions of "The Messiah" owned by the Library of Congress and the Harvard University Library were believed to be the oldest editions of the work in this country.

The battered, leather-bound volume in the Johnstown Library is not dated, but apparently was one of 129 printed around 1758. Handel wrote the oratorio in 1742.

Griffith said the book was one of a hundred presented to the library in 1939 by Donald Davis of Johnstown. The books had belonged to Davis' father, who has since died.

Davis said he had no idea where his father got the book.

3 Red Ships In U. S. Area Of Maneuvers

By the United Press

Defense officials said yesterday they are not alarmed over the presence of three Russian fishing vessels in the Caribbean area where American armed forces soon will hold their largest peacetime maneuvers in history.

They said the ships are making a "routine passage" through the Carribbean Sea and Panama Canal on their way from the Baltic Sea to Vladivostok in the Pacific.

It was pointed out the joint Army-Navy-Air Force maneuvers are not scheduled to begin until February, long after the Russian vessels should be clear of the area.

The ships are the Peramutr, Trepang and Chiaka. They are 350-ton vessels designed for fishing and light coastal trade. Defense officials said about 12 similar Russian ships have used the Panama Canal route to Vladivostok in the past two years.

They said a number of other Soviet fishing craft are going to the Pacific by way of the Mediterranean and the Suez Canal.

The Army, which guards the Canal, said its inspectors carefully check all ships for "dangerous cargo or anything which might endanger the waterway" before letting them proceed.

'Globe' Chased By Pilot Held To Be Venus

Winston-Salem, N. C., Dec. 29 (U.P.).—The pilot who pursued a "mysterious silver sphere" over Hamlet, N. C., yesterday didn't have a chance, an amateur astronomer said today. He probably was chasing the planet Venus.

The bright, silvery globe was spotted in Winston-Salem, Hamlet and Fayetteville, N. C. Phillip Gibbons of Hamlet, former Air Force pilot, pursued it in a light plane. It eluded him.

"It was no conventional airplane or balloon," he said.

So it wasn't, agreed amateur stargazer M. T. Y. McManus of Winston-Salem. It was Venus. He had solved the same problem here for weather observers and airport tower operators who became alarmed when the object was seen over their airport and wouldn't answer signals.

Venus, occasionally visible by day, was "quite brilliant" yesterday, McManus said, adding, "it shone with a white light and appeared about as large as the head of a thumbstack to the naked eye. Through the telescope it looked like a beautiful pint-sized moon."

[The Air Force replied by announcing there aren't any "flying saucers" and it has ended its two-year investigation after checking 375 rumors of "flying saucers" and other sky phenomena.]

Dow Appointed to U. N. Indonesia Commission

The State Department yesterday announced appointment of Edward A. Dow, jr., as acting United States representative on the United Nations Commission for Indonesia. A native of Omaha, he will assume the duties of H. Merle Cochran, who has been appointed U. S. Ambassador to Indonesia.

Quirino Takes Oath, Scores Communism

Manila (Friday), Dec. 30 (U.P.).—Elpidio Quirino was sworn in for his second term as President of the Philippine Republic today and in his inaugural address he pledged himself to fight comunism and maintain good relations with the United States.

Quirino, 59, born the son of a village jail keeper took the oath of office to succeed himself from Supreme Court Chief Justice Manuel Moran shortly after noon. The ceremony before cheering thousands was held in historic Luneta Park on the Manila Bay waterfront.

The ruffle of drums and the flourish of triumpets sounded to the roar of a 22-gun salute as the two-hour inaugural ceremony, featured by a military parade, got under way on the spot where national hero Jose Rizal was executed by the Spaniards 53 years ago today.

Quirino was reelected last November 8 after a bitter campaign against Jose P. Laurel, wartime puppet President under the Japanese. He first became President April 14, 1948, after the death of Manuel Roxas, the republic's first chief executive.

Quirino pledged that the Philippines will keep an open mind toward Communist China while helping to forestall "the entry of subversive ideas" into the Asiatic sphere.

U. S. May Ban Travel to Two More Nations

By The Associated Press

The United States is considering a ban on travel by Americans to Communist-run Poland and Czechoslovakia.

This was indicated yesterday by a State Department official who disclosed that a note was sent to Poland on December 16 "expressing this Government's concern for the welfare and safety of Americans traveling in Poland."

The note demanded information about the disappearance of Hermann Field, an American citizen who was last seen publicly in Warsaw last August 22.

A note also was sent Czechoslovakia on December 21 asking information about Hermann's brother, Noel Field, and the latter's wife, Herta, who dropped from sight in Czechoslovakia.

The State Department already has banned travel by Americans to Communist-run Hungary.

Recalling that, reporters asked Michael McDermott, State Department press officer, whether the new actions meant the United States would ban travel to Poland.

"We are concerned about the safety of Americans in Poland," McDermott said. "If it is not safe for them there, obviously we would consider what steps to take."

As for Czechoslovakia, McDermott said that the State Department is awaiting a reply to its message, and then will consider what steps to take.

Noel Feld has figured in testimony in the current Alger Hiss trial in New York. He is a one-time State Department employ who has lived for years in Europe.

Announcement of the new notes was accompanied by a fresh State Department denunciation of Hungary over its treatment of Israel G. Jacobson and Robert A. Vogeler.

Vogeler, an American communications official, was arrested last November 18 and has since been held incommunicado. Jacobson, an official of the Jewish Relief Agency, was released Wednesday after being detained by Hungarian police.

In a formal statement read by McDermott, the State Department repeated that this Government is "considering further appropriate steps" against Hungary in the event the Vogeler case is not settled satisfactorily.

This implied threat was first made in a note sent Hungary on December 20 when it was announced that passports no longer would be issued for travel by Americans to Hungary.

3 More Navy Ships Going to Far East

Chinese Nationalists notified the United States yesterday that approaches to the Yangtze River and the port of Shanghai had been mined.

The State Department's immediate answer was a renewed warning to American shipping companies against sending their ships into the danger zone.

Still, the combination of the warships' move to the Far East and the President's meeting gave the impression that the Administration was "doing something" about the situation in China and in Asia generally.

President Truman himself has been represented as wanting a "positive" Far Eastern policy in time to head off some of the inevitable criticism that will come when Congress assembles next week.

Before yesterday's meeting there were well-substantiated reports that the Joint Chiefs of Staff had recommended sending an American military mission to Formosa, now the last toehold of the Chinese Nationalists.

Although the Joint Chiefs still disapprove sending American troops to occupy the island, and see no point in declaring it Japanese territory to keep it out of Communist hands, they are willing now to send a military mission to survey the scene and recommend what else, if anything, might be done to help the Nationalists.

Persons at yesterday's meeting were tight-lipped about whether Formosa had been discussed. But after the meeting one informed source said firm and final decisions about Formosa had not yet been reached

The United States already has a diplomatic mission at Taipeh, the Formosan capital, headed by Robert C. Strong, a State Department career man, and including Army, Navy and Air Force officers. Ambassador Philip C. Jessup is also expected in Formosa next month, with instructions to survey the situation and recommend what, if anything, the United States should do.

Senator Tom Connally (D., Tex.), chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, said yesterday it would be "wise" to send a military mission to the island to advise the Nationalist forces.

The Senator said he personally would rather see Formosa declared Japanese territory than let it fall into Communist hands.

Formosa is, of course, not the only area around China where American policy decisions are awaited. Government departments here have not yet agreed on a wide range of political, military and economic issues in the Far East, and until they do agree there can be no long-range program of action in response to the Communist advances in eastern and southeastern Asia.

This may explain why yesterdays meeting with President Truman was virtually a Cabinet meeting on foreign affairs.

The meeting lasted an hour and 10 minutes with the President in the chair most of the time.

Those present were Secretary of State Acheson, Undersecretary of Defense Stephen T. Early (Secretary Johnson is on vacation); Navy Secretary Matthews; Treasury Secretary Snyder; the Acting Economic Cooperation Administrator, William C. Foster; the Acting Secretary of Commerce, Cornelius V. Whitney; and the chief of the Central Intelligence Agency, Rear Admiral Roscoe Hillenkoetter.

After President Truman left the meeting the others stayed behind for a quarter of an hour. Promptly thereafter, whetrer by coincidence or otherwise, the Navy issued its announcement of sending the warships to the Pacific.

The ships will sail from San Diego January 11, according to present plans. They are the Essex class carrier Boxer, with a normal complement of 45 planes, and the destroyers Buck and Thomason.

Isbrandtsen To Send Ships Into Shanghai

Hong Kong, (Friday) Dec. 30 (U.P.).—Agents for the Isbrandtsen line here said today that the company will send three ships into Communist-held Shanghai within the next month despite warnings from the Chinese Nationalists

End of the Corn War . . .

Mediation in India by U. S., Britain Urged

The best help that America can give to the great subcontinent of India is to mediate across the boards, along with Britain, the undeclared war between the Indian Union and Pakistan—a war which is rapidly exhausting both countries and might at any moment burst into shooting hostilities. This is the view brought back from India by Herbert Elliston, editor of The Washington Post, after an on-the-spot survey during which he was a delegate to an unofficial Indo-American conference in New Delhi.

"Trade is at a standstill, except for widespread smuggling, despite the fact that the two countries have complementary economies. But, worse than that, statesmanship is in a stalemate. The positions on both sides have congealed, with 'face' a factor which forbids any meeting of minds. It is an ideal situation for mediation, and the leading men on both sides admit it. They are not strong enough to move themselves, and would like a crutch to get off a perch on which they are kept by the public opinion they have themselves created." Help of any other kind is out of the question so long as this situation prevails, especially help that would seem partial.

"I know the lot of the mediator is thankless," Mr. Elliston went on, "but in this case the United States is deeply concerned in seeing that peace is kept between these two important countries and sound relations established. If trouble breaks out, the whole subcontinent would be ablaze, and the conflict would be long and sanguinary."

Falling Living Standards

Elliston said this conclusion is obvious to every onlooker. "For two years India's living standards have been falling. She is spending two thirds of her budget in military preparations, Pakistan three quarters. The armies cannot be kept forever marching up the hill and down again. If war should break out, the price of wheat in India would soar, depressing still further India's standards, which must be the world's lowest."

The beneficiaries of such a conflict, in Elliston's opinion, would be the Russians and the Communists. Russia would take command of the situation in Kashmir, which is a huge lozenge sprawling between the Russian frontier and New Delhi. In Calcutta, where there is the most lawlessness, joblessness would lead to anarchy. Indeed, Bengal is kept in any kind of order only by a miracle. Already shutdowns have started in the 185 jute mills on the banks of the Hooghly, for Pakistan will not let any jute, even the raw material already purchased by India, leave East Pakistan. There it is now, in laid-up barges and on rail sidings, and the situation is for all the world a reminder of the one in Berlin during the Russo-Western tussle.

Leaders in a Box

"The battle is too tragic to be allowed to continue," Elliston said. "Common sense cannot prevail without the help of a third party. The leaders on both sides are in a box. They need help to get out of it. Nehru is nonviolent, but he is not decisive, and an appeal to force, based on frustration and desperation, is, as I know, not outside the calculations of some of Premier Nehru's colleagues."

"I was in the office of one of these colleagues five days," Elliston explained. "He was telling me of the embargo on jute. He talked about reprisals, though, God knows, these two countries have applied many in two years of independence. This one was to shut off coal for which Pakistan depends upon India. This has been done since I left. All Pakistan's coal comes from India's Bihar. Her irrigation water in the Punjab is regulated from locks in India's possession, and I heard threats of this kind of reprisal, too. While I was in this minister's office, the governor of West Bengal called the Minister on the telephone, and demanded firm action by the Delhi government before chaos broke out in Calcutta. This, he said, would assuredly come, especially if the 13 million Hindus left in East Pakistan, now threatened with expulsion, come pouring over the frontier."

Bunche Might Help

Elliston said this was the situation he left in India, and warranted the entension of good offices, and "by men of the caliber of Ralph Bunche." Elliston added that Camille Gutt, as head of the Monetary Fund, should be co-opted "for Pakistan has applied for admission to the Monetary Fund, and Gutt could advise on the exchange rate of Pakistan money, the relation between which and India money has bred its own brood of disputes."

"Your perspective is restored when you travel," Elliston said, "and I myself was surprised to find that Kashmir is only one of the problems at issue between the two countries, and not even the most important." On Kashmir Elliston said the only sensible solution he heard was partition, but even this solution is only mentioned privately by Pakistanis and Indians, so set have become the attitudes on either side.

'Non-Partisan' Policy Urged

much the same ground that his teammate but political opposite, Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.) discussed with reporters at another Capitol press conference just 10 days ago.

Only Vandenberg called it "bipartisan" or "unpartisan" foreign policy.

"I prefer to call it nonpartisan," said Connally, who chafes easily in double-harness with Vandenberg.

Under a crossfire of questions, Connally went on record on these other points:

1. Spain. Strongly favored United States recognition of Spain despite a United States-sponsored 1946 U. N. General Assembly resolution opposing recognition of Franco's government. Connally stressed Spain's "strategic" importance, said he did not regard the U. N. action as "legally binding" on the United States and argued that recognition would not mean approval of the Franco government.

2. China. Emphasized that Ambassador-at-Large Philip K. Jessup is now making a survey of the Far East situation and reserved official judgment until his return. Opposed immediate recognition of the Communist regime and, like Vandenberg, said ultimate recognition should hinge on whether the Communist government demonstrates (1) control of the territory and people it assumes to represent and (2) gives absolute assurance of respect for and obedience to international law.

3. ECA. Favored cutting Marshall Plan appropriation by "a sizable amount" but said we should not "penalize success." Connally said he would consider any cut up to one billion dollars sufficient. The Texan argued we must start "tapering" now to terminate ECA in 1952 but said it would have been better at the start if we had made ECA "a 6 or 8-year program."

4. MAP. Voiced hope that bilateral agreement with North Atlantic Pact countries can be quickly concluded so "we can proceed without delay to the important task of strengthening the forces of freedom in Europe." Connally thought it "likely" another MAP appropriation will be needed but assumed "we won't need as much as we did the first year."

5. Domestic. Took an optimistic view of the 1950 business outlook but said "every possible economy in Government should be attempted." Connally said our military assistance to Atlantic Pact countries should make it possible to trim our own military budget by "a substantial sum."

Under questioning, Connally said he did not think the Nation's "nonpartisan" position on foreign policy is "weakening" despite reports to the contrary.

"I think the people are satisfied with the cooperation we are getting and do not favor making it a partisan matter," he said.

Was our position "weaker" in the Senate, a reporter asked.

"I don't think so—except in spots," Connally grinned.

He was plainly referring to attacks on the bipartisan course by Senate GOP Leader Kenneth S. Wherry (Nebr.) and a few others, but told newsmen he did not care to get into an argument with Wherry.

Told that Wherry defined "nonpartisan" foreign policy as the "united front" reached after actual decisions on the Senate floor, Connally said:

"That's not in harmony with our procedure . . . How in the world can the Senate consider these matters before they have come before the Foreign Relations Committee."

In a prepared statement read during the press conference, Connally said that neither the President nor the Administration "has sought to employ our foreign policies as political maneuvers within the United States."

He reminded newsmen that the President appointed one Republican, Warren R. Austin, as our chief representative in the United Nations, and another Republican, John Foster Dulles, as a delegate.

He said the President was acting for "all of the people" in foreign affairs and "courageously and wisely" discharging his constitutional duties.

A reporter asked if he was implying that Republicans were playing politics in the foreign field.

"I don't charge they have as a party," he said. "Some of them may be willing to do so individually."

On the question of possible ultimate recognition of the Communist regime in China, for example, he said Secretary Acheson had assured him "full consultation with the Foreign Relations Committee will take place before any steps are taken" in that direction.

On the Far East issue, Connally stressed: "The most important thing we can do now is to use our influence and our resources to prevent the further expansion of communism in Asia."

He said he didn't always take money to do that. In India, Burma and Pakistan, for example, he said the United States could "cooperate" with Democratic institutions and "show them that democracy means something more than a mouth-filling phrase."

Going on record for recognition of Spain, Connally said that "in no wise" indicated his approval of Franco's government. He said there were trade and other advantages to be gained from having an Ambassador there.

Besides, he said, "Spain has the Pyrenees."

Connally said he was a member of our delegation to the U. N. General Assembly when it adopted the resolution opposing recognition of Franco's government, but did not approve of it at the time. He said it would be "preferable" for the U. N. to change its position before we acted but not legally necessary.

"I do not see why a mere resolution by the United Nations General Assembly should be legally binding on us," he said. "We are a sovereign nation."

Under further questioning, Connally said Spain, of course, could not become a member of the North Atlantic Pact unless all the signatories agreed.

"We wouldn't want to break up the North Atlantic Treaty just to get Spain in," said Connally. "But events and a little persuasion could bring it about."

Judith Coplon Asks Retrial In Washington

New York, Dec. 29 (AP).—Judith Coplon, convicted last summer of stealing secret papers for the Russians, asked a new trial today.

Her lawyer, Archibald Palmer, based the motion on what he called "new evidence" that the FBI made extensive use of wire-tapping when it investigated her.

The motion was filed with the Circuit Court of Appeals in Washington, D. C., where the former Justice Department employe was tried.

The so-called "new evidence" developed in hearings here through which Miss Coplon is trying to escape trial with Valentin A. Gubitchev on spy conspiracy charges.

A number of FBI agents testified at the hearings that Miss Coplon's home and office telephones were tapped. Palmer contended that he was unable to develop this point at the Washington trial.

On conviction in Washington, Miss Coplon was sentenced to 40 months to 10 years in prison. She is free in bail pending appeal.

Fred Strine, special assistant to the United States Attorney General, said a notice of Palmer's new motion, served on him late today, gave the date of the hearing on the motion as 10 a. m. (EST) January 6.

Both Palmer and Gubitchev's lawyer, Abraham A. Pomerantz, say the case against the defendants is based on "illegal" wire-tap evidence and thus should be dismissed. Palmer claims Miss Coplon's mail was illegally intercepted.

Gubitchev sought in another way to escape trial here today. His attorney argued at length before Federal Judge Sylvester J. Ryan that Gubitchev, as the holder of a diplomatic passport, is immune from prosecution.

Paraphrasing Gertrude Stein's famous "A rose is a rose is a rose," Pomerantz declared that "a diplomatic visa is a diplomatic visa is a diplomatic visa."

And he said the United States would be breaking a solemn principle of international relations if it put the Russian on trial.

Strine replied that the possession of a diplomatic passport or visa does not necessarily give immunity. He said such passports are often granted to "persons of consequence" as a matter of courtesy.

The Government also made available to the judge the statement issued last March by the State Department—that Gubitchev "enjoys no immunity from arrest or judicial process with regard to the acts charged."

Also at the judge's request, the United Nations filed a statement of Gubitchev's status. It noted that he has been suspended from his U. N. engineering post, with full pay, "pending investigation and without prejudice."

Hiss Defense Questions Chambers' Sanity

New York, Dec. 29 (NYHT).—New evidence in connection with defense efforts to impeach the sanity of Whittaker Chambers, chief prosecution witness in the perjury trial of Alger Hiss, was produced in United States District Court today.

Karl H. Helfrich of Upper Montclair, N. J., who knew Chambers briefly in 1920 and afterward received about a half-dozen long letters from him, gave a cryptic account of this association over repeated objections from the prosecution.

Earlier in the day Hiss completed his testimony after almost five days on the stand, a little more than half of which was cross-examination. Rear Admiral Arthur J. Hepburn (retired), who knew Hiss in connection with the Dumbarton Oaks Conference of 1944, said his reputation for loyalty, honesty and veracity was "excellent."

During the last hour of the day Mrs. Priscilla Hiss, wife of the defendant, began her testimony. She sketched her early life and education, corroborated her husband's story of meeting Chambers under the name of George Crosley, and said she was associated with a local Socialist Party organization in New York in the early 30's, but not after she and Hiss moved to Washington.

Helfrich testified that in September, 1920, Chambers was assigned as his roommate when both arrived at Williams College to begin their freshman year. Both bought second-hand furniture for their suite of rooms, Helfrich said, but when the time came to go to the first meeting of the freshman class at a class dinner Chambers refused to go.

According to the witness Chambers said he "had several problems to think out, and would remain in the room and gain some inspiration from reading the Bible.

"Helfrich said he went to the dinner alone and on his return Chambers told him he had decided to leave Williams that night and go to Columbia University.

Chambers left about midnight that night, after asking Helfrich to sell his furniture and send him a check for the proceeds, the witness said. Later, Helfrich said, he received a half a dozen letters written in longhand, some running to 10 or 12 pages. One of the letters asked him to go to the postoffice in Williamstown ask for a letter addressed to some third name which Helfrich said he had forgotten, and readdress and mail this letter to Chambers.

Helfrich got the letter from the postoffice, opened it, and decided that "judging from the style and composition it also had been written by Chambers." Thereupon, he said, he took this and all the letters he had received from Chambers and gave them to the late Dr. Harry A. Garfield, then president of Williams College.

Assistant United States Attorney Thomas F. Murphy successfully prevented Helfrich from describing the contents of the letters. Judge Henry W. Goddard allowed the rest of Helfrich's testimony when Defense Counsel Claude B. Cross said it was intended as groundwork for psychiatric testimony.

Earlier today Judge Goddard indicated that he would announce next week his ruling on whether the psychiatric testimony itself will be allowed.

Excerpts from the grand jury minutes read today by Murphy showed that Hiss offered to bring Dr. Binger as a witness before the grand jury which indicted him on December 15, 1948. It appeared that the offer was not accepted. On that morning, the minutes showed, Hiss asked to appear before the grand jury and made this statement:

"One of the jurors said yesterday that the theory I was expressing was fantastic. I agree that there are many fantastic things about this case. My lawyers and I have consulted a noted psychiatrist about Mr. Chambers' trouble personality. We have turned this information over to the Department of Justice and we have asked Mr. Alexander Campbell, head of the criminal division, to talk directly to the psychiatrist.'

Price Peg Dilemma Seen for Brannan

Peabody Is Head

Sawyer Unit To Advise on Advertising

Stuart Peabody of New York has been selected chairman of the Commerce Department's new Advertising Advisory Committee, Secretary of Commerce Sawyer announced yesterday.

Peabody and other officers of the committee were selected by nomination and vote of the 18-man Advertising Advisory Committee appointed early this month by Secretary Sawyer. The committee was appointed to advise the Secretary of Commerce on the problems of the industry which he has described as "one of the keystones of national prosperity."

Peabody is assistant vice president of the Borden company in charge of advertising and public relations.

Named as vice chairmen were Fairfax M. Cone of Chicago and Philip L. Graham of Washington.

Cone is chairman of Foote, Cone Belding, an advertising agency. Graham is publisher of The Washington Post and president of radio station WTOP.

Sawyer said he was "looking to this committee not only to do a good technical job for the advertising industry but also to help the Department of Commerce serve better the interests of all business."

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Next week may usher in a happy year for a lot of persons, but it promises headaches for Agriculture Secretary Charles F. Brannan and his staff in charge of farm price supports.

In its recent session Congress passed a bushel of hot potatoes to Brannan, in the Farm Act of 1949, authored largely by his predecessor, Senator Clinton P. Anderson (D., N. Mex.).

It provided that Brannan must determine whether millions of farmers who for years have been protected by price supports, will continue to get them.

In fact, it provided that Brannan must decide whether any except a comparatively few products will get a definite scale of supports.

During the war Congress added a number of farm products to the list of those that must be supported at 90 percent of parity. This list was known as the Steagall amendment. It included hogs, chickens, eggs, milk products, potatoes, dry beans, dry peas, turkeys, soybeans, flaxseed and peanuts for oil, American-Egyptian cotton and sweet potatoes.

The Agricultural Act of 1948, known as the Hope-Aiken Act, continued mandatory supports for these products until the end of 1949 at 90 percent of parity.

The new law, however, includes only milk products and potatoes from that list, but adds honey, tung nuts and mohair (goat wool).

Support Up to Brannan

Also the new law doesn't fix the support level at 90 percent of parity. Instead it says they must be supported at from 75 to 90 percent of a new parity formula that raises parity in some cases and lowers it in others. The law leaves it up to Brannan what the support level shall be.

On all other products it leaves it to Brannan to decide whether there shall be any supports at all, and how much.

Brannan has acted already on some items. He has:

1. Extended price supports of dairy products at the same rate as this year, about $3.07 per 100 pounds of manufactured milk (dried or evaporated).

2. Has fixed the price support level for potatoes at 60 percent of the new parity formula—about 96 cents a bushel compared to $1.08 this year.

3. Has fixed the support level for tung nuts at $80 a ton. Tung nuts being a new crop with no historical basis for parity, the price support figure was based on "60 percent of an estimated parity."

Support for Hogs, Eggs

4. Has ordered that price supports for hogs be continued at the present level, about $14.74 a hundred pounds this month, until March. Hog prices are now about 70 cents above that level.

5. Has fixed the price support level for eggs at 70 percent of the new parity—or about 37 cents a dozen compared with 47 cents this year.

Brannan's order on eggs has given a foretaste of what is to come. His office and the offices of Congressmen from Midwestern agricultural States where most of the Government's egg purchases have been made, have been flooded by protests.

Th egg-buying program is now temporarily halted, and in some States farmers are reported getting as low as 20 cents a dozen for "nest-run" eggs. Hog prices are getting so near the old price support levels that other farmers are calling for guarantees.

Some officials believe the complaints about the egg program are being inspired by egg-drying plants that have profited through the Government's program. They are telling farmers that buying under the new order will start early next month.

Among those who have raised the issue as to eggs is Senator Hugh Butler (R., Nebr.) "I am asking the Agriculture Department what they intend to do," Butler declared yesterday.

Representative H. Carl Andersen (R., Minn.) wired Brannan, complaining of "chaos" in the egg market because of what he termed "Government inaction." Producers in his district, he alleged, "are losing approximately $15,000 daily because there is no established market for eggs."

Others, such as the office staffs of Senator Guy M. Gillette (D., Iowa) and Bourke B. Hickenlooper (R., Iowa) report receiving stacks of mail.

The department now has about 67 million pounds of dried eggs on hand, and is facing a loss of 90 million dollars on them. In reply to complaints, Brannan has stated:

"As in the case of potatoes a year ago, I have been extremely reluctant to give my approval to any lowering of the farm support price for eggs. Under the circumstances, however, with no other means than purchases to carry out commitments to egg producers, there is no alternative."

Brannan in "Hot Spot"

A department executive pointed out that with elections coming up next fall, the new law puts Brannan in a "hot spot."

"If he doesn't support the prices of commodities not covered in the law, the opposition can tell the farmers the Administration is throwing them down.

"If he does, they can tell the consumers he is holding up the cost of living. And it can tell business he is trying to bankrupt the Government."

The only products on which Congress voted mandatory price supports for next year at 90 percent of parity are the so-called "basics": wheat, corn, cotton, rice, peanuts and tobacco.

Even these won't get as high supports as this year, because parity is slightly lower than a year ago. Parity is a price for farm products supposedly equal to the current price of what farmers must buy.

Mayock Runs For California Governorship

Los Angeles, Dec. 29 (AP).—Welburn Mayock, former chief counsel for the Democratic National Committee and a personal friend of President Truman, announced today he would oppose James Roosevelt in the California Governorship race.

Roosevelt, elder son of the late President, and a Democrat himself, has announced he will seek both Republican and Democratic nominations. Mayock, a Los Angeles attorney, said he would run only as a Democrat.

He denied that he had White House backing, but political sources here say he may be the President's answer to Roosevelt's candidacy. Roosevelt was a leader in the "draft Eisenhower" movement last year.

"I think James Roosevelt would be bad for my party and for the State of California," said Mayock, "and I am not going to allow him to take the nomination by default."

The Young Democrats of California have asked the resignation of James Roosevelt as Democratic National committeeman.

James' entry into the Governor's race is the reason for the action, announced William J. Tiernan and Henry James, southern and northern chairmen, respectively, of the group.

They stated yesterday that Roosevelt should resign in favor of someone who "unfettered by ambitions for personal aggrandizement," may devote time to unifying the party.

GOP Senators To Map Policy

Republican Senators yesterday were called into a strategy huddle for the new session of Congress opening Tuesday.

Chairman Millikin (R., Colo.) sent out notices for a closed conference of all 42 GOP Senators for 3 p. m., Tuesday, January 3.

Party strategy and the GOP legislative program are to be discussed. Also likely to come up are possible shifts in committee assignments due to the addition of two new GOP Senators—Dworshak of Idaho and Darby of Kansas.

Senate Democrats plan a similar session at the same hour, but Majority Leader Lucas of Illinois, who also heads the steering committee, has not put out official notice as yet.

A session of the Senate GOP policy committee, of which Senator Taft (R., Ohio) is chairman, probably will be held Tuesday morning before the Senate convenes at noon.

Biochemist Isolates Anti-Arthritis Factor Of Acth, Convention of Scientists Hears

60-year-old man crippled with arthritis.

The patient experienced dramatic relief of his long-standing pain to the same degree of the similarly-afflicted who have been given the whole adrenocorticotrophic hormone (acth), Dr. Kinsell reported. And as with acth, the pain and crippling returned after the patient was taken off the daily dosage schedule, he said.

Acth is the product obtained from pituitary glands of hogs, the pea-size growth-regulating gland within the hog's (and man's) brain. It is believed to stimulate the adrenal glands to secrete powerful hormones beneficial against a number of degenerative processes of the body.

Cortisone, or Compound E as it was first named, is obtained from adrenal glands of cattle, those lima bean-size glands which crown man's kidneys. Both cortisone and acth, whose antiarthritis properties were first unfolded last spring, are so limited in present supply that there isn't even enough of them to meet research demands.

Within Range of Synthesis

The acth anti-arthritis fraction isolated by Dr. Li May may not be the pure constituent, but even at that it is down to a molecular weight of about 1200 which puts it within practical range of synthesis (laboratory manufacture), Dr. Kinsell said. By comparison whole acth has a molecular weight of around 20,000, making its synthesis more of a dream than a hope.

Dr. Kinsell, however, cautioned against any expectancy of immediate synthesis. Several years may elapse before this can be done, he reported. In the meantime, he said, supply of acth will continue to be scant, and the arthritic public (estimated to number as high as seven million persons in the United States) will have to be content with present, sometimes effective relieving measures.

An inkling of how cortisone works to relieve arthritis was also given here today by another clinical investigator. Dr. Burton L. Baker of the University of Michigan Medical School reported the compound appears to concentrate on the connective tissues of the body, inhibiting growth of the tissue cells.

High Blood Pressure Discussed

Dr. A. C. Corcoran of the Cleveland Clinic Foundation, showed that adrenal activity plays an important role in high blood pressure in humans. In laboratory experiments, he said, high blood presure and arterial disease were produced in rats by treatment with desoxycorticosterone, and adrenal-like steroid.

Importance of the animal experimentation, he said, is that it may lead to tests on humans suffering from high blood pressure to determine which might benefit by low-sodium diet. Such diets for persons suffering high blood pressure are controversial among doctors since some patients appear to benefit from them while others don't—and the diets are hard to take, and harder to stick to.

Dr. Donald R. Griffin, zoologist of Cornell University, told another scientific session here of atomic age techniques in studying the habits of birds and animals. The studies are being made, he said, by tagging birds and animals with radioactive capsules and timing their comings and goings with a geiger counter attached to a timer.

Trace Animals' Movements

With such means, Dr. Griffin said, scientists are able to trace movements of aquatic or burrowing animals under water or beneath the ground without the disturbing presence of a human observer. Of course, the animals and birds must first be caught to be tagged, he said.

Dr. John L. Fuller, of the Jackson Experimental Laboratory, Bar Harbor, Me., told another session on animal behavior and sociobiology that puppies are unresponsive to "conditioning" for the first three weeks. After that, he said, they can be trained to stimuli quite readily.

Another scientist from the same laboratory, Mrs. Dorcas D. Crary, reported out experiments which indicate man may be as old as his knees. Comparison of development of limb bones of humans and inbred rabbits, she reported, shows a high degree of similarity, and by X-ray studies of the rabbits' joints the animal's degree of maturity could be determined.

U. S. Accused of Neglecting Child Health Research

New York, Dec. 29. (AP).—American scientists today heard the Federal Government accused of neglecting child health research while spending millions for bombs.

Dr. Leona Baumgartner, of the Children's Bureau, U. S. Department of Labor, made the statement before the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

Only a few thousand dollars a year of Federal money goes for child health research, she said, but more than half a billion is spent on other research, including immense sums on bombs and atomic energy. By contrast, she said, children are by far the most important product of the United States.

There are 20,000,000 American children with poor teeth, 4,000,000 with poor sight, 1,000,000 with poor hearing, 200,000 with epilepsy, and 170,000 with cerebral palsy, she said. Despite the $7,500,000 Congress annually gives states to help sick children, the states turn down thousands of children a year for lack of funds. This year there are 30,000 crippled children unable to get help, she declared.

She wants the research to go much farther than child diseases—to cover, for example:

The child who has actual pains due to taking a school test; the child who can't do good work because of home worries; the many millions of children who lay the foundation for mental troubles; the great puzzle of why some children have most of the accidents, which are the largest cause of child deaths over age one.

Harvard Man Named As President-Elect

New York, Dec. 29 (AP).—Dr. Kirtley F. Mather, professor of geology at Harvard University, today was chosen president-elect of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

He will take office January 15 as president-elect and as president on January 15, 1951. The AAAS is the largest organization of diversified science, a federation of 214 scientific societies and it has 45,000 members.

Dr. Roger Adams, professor of chemistry, University of Illinois, will take office as president next month.

Dr. Mather in a news conference said he hoped scientists in the coming years would not only produce more inventions and gadgets, but would do more to guide their use for human welfare.

New members of the executive committee of the AAAS are Dr. Paul B. Sears, botanist of Oberlin College; Dr. John R. Dunning, Columbia University physicist; Dr. Fernandus Payne, Indiana University zoologist, and Dr. Warren Weaver of the Rockefeller Foundation in New York.

Rep. Sanborn to Seek Senate Seat in Idaho

Hagerman, Idaho, Dec. 29 (AP).—Representative John Sanborn (R., Idaho) announced today he would be a candidate for the Republican nomination for the six-year term for United States Senator next year.

Sanborn will seek his party's nomination for the seat now held by Senator Glen H. Taylor (D., Idaho). Taylor has announced he will be a candidate for reelection.

Because of the death of Senator Bert H. Miller (D., Idaho), in October, Idaho will elect two Senators in 1950—one for six years to fill the term held by Senator Taylor and another for four years, the remainder of Senator Miller's term.

Israel Jacobson Off On Journey to U. S.

Vienna (Friday) Dec. 30 (AP).—Israel Jacobson, who was freed Tuesday by Hungary, was given passage last night on an American military train scheduled to leave for Munich.

He plans to fly to Paris from Munich, then leave Paris Saturday night by plane for New York, arriving sometime Sunday.

Showgirl Linked With Henry Fonda

SUSAN BLANCHARD, stepdaughter of Lyricist and Theatrical Producer Oscar Hammerstein, will marry actor Henry Fonda when he gets a divorce, Columnist Dorothy Kilgallen said yesterday in the New York Journal-American The United Press reported an associate of Fonda saying the actor and his wife, the former Frances Brokaw, are planning a divorce after 13 years of marriage. Miss Blanchard, who has appeared in minor roles as an actress and showgirl, is in her twenties. Fonda, now playing the lead in the Broadway play, "Mr. Roberts," is in his forties have served in the Civil War, the Indian Wars, the Spanish-American War, the Boxer Rebellion, the Philippine Insurrection, World Wars I and II.

Richard Engel, VA's Veteran, Ends 50-Year Federal Career

He has handled for the Veterans Administration the claims of the dependents of the men who fought these wars and died in them, or after them.

This is the official Richard Engel.

But there is another Richard Engel. He is the man who remembers Washington as a town "like a little palace," with tulips and pansies planted in the parks each spring; a clean, fresh-smelling borough whose suburbs were measured by Park road, whose city limits seemed to be forever bounded by Florida ave.

Remember Rausher's

He is the man who used to squire young ladies to Rausher's—THE place for a dance—at Connecticut ave. and L st. nw.

He would watch President William McKinley out for his morning stroll, or see President Theodore Roosevelt canter from the White House to Rock Creek Park for vigorous exercise, then return sedately in a carriage.

He was here when gaslight illuminated this city, when horses drew trolleys, and when it was a lark to ride the "summer trolley" with its long benches and open sides.

He watched the city made over "from a quiet easy-going town to a bustling city."

Great Parades—Great Actors

In the process he saw the great parades. He went to the theater and saw the great actors—Sir Henry Irving, Ellen Terry, Sarah Bernhardt, Eleanora Duse, Coquelin, Richard Mansfield.

It was after World War I that he saw the city begin to grow. "I noticed a complete change in the buildings," he said. Now there is not the same clean "palace" of the nineteenth century.

So much for memories. Richard Engel has seen the town. He has also seen its people. He has noticed greatest change in its women.

"I have thought about them a lot," he said. Today they are "more independent—not so dependable. They are rising in the professions and doing excellent work. They are given self expression in the professions to a high degree."

Long Hair Most Becoming

"And this, I think, is good in some instances. In others, I think they would be happier as housewives."

Fashions? Long hair is most becoming—dresses of medium length. "Although the ladies don't seem to like them."

The hats? "Those today are more becoming, more individual, and more self-expressive."

Children? "They are not more active—they have always been active. But they seem to have more knowledge. They are brighter. They are given so many chances for self-expression. I don't really approve of allowing a child to do everything he wants to do.

"I don't believe in sparing the rod. Discipline makes a child see, and grow, and get truth out of life. If you allow him to grow up by expressing everything he wants in his own way, he will never know whether he is on the right track."

Truth? "The knowledge in religion of redemption through Christ is the greatest knowledge one can have. That to me is the greatest truth."

Today, after 50 years, 9 months and 18 days of Government service, most of it for the Veterans Administration, Richard Engel, the official man, becomes Richard Engel, his own man.

He retires to "rest a while" at 806 Farragut st. nw. But then he wants to "take up other activities that will give me self expression—something entirely different from anything I've ever done."

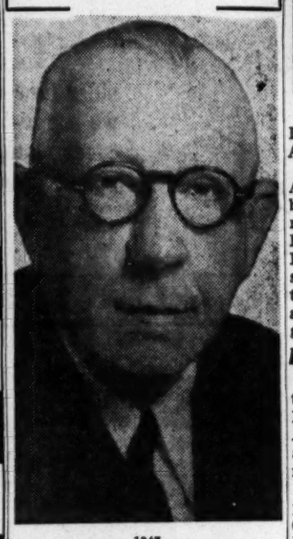
Julius Peyser

Fifty-Year D. C. Lawyer Views Scene



1947
JULIUS I. PEYSER
Fifty years on the job

By Lee Grove
Post Reporter

Fifty years ago Julius I. Peyser hung out his shingle as a practicing lawyer at 4½ Indiana ave., "in front of the statue of Lincoln" by the court house.

In the intervening years Peyser has moved uptown—the office to which he still goes daily is in the Investment Building, K and 15th sts. nw.—and grown with the city.

Peyser is a part of Washington; in fact, his father, Philip, Forty-niner and friend of Judah P. Benjamin, chief secretary of state for the Confederacy, settled here about 1860.

More precisely, it turns out upon further conversation, his father returned here about 1860. The Peyser family, originally from the Schleswig-Holstein area on the Danish-German border, after a brief pause at Petersburg, Va., came to Washington about 1832.

A Haberdasher

Julius's father, Philip, was a haberdasher, and the son, seventh of nine children, said yesterday that there is a hat in the Lincoln Museum worn by Booth at the time of the assassination in Ford's Theater—with the label of Peyser's haberdashery.

Peyser was born on Seventh st. and attended the old Abbott School, where he won a scholarship for good penmanship to the Spencerian Business College, on the corner of 7th and D sts. nw.

The letter of notification is among the framed degrees and other documents hanging on the walls of his office now.

Peyser's interests did not stop with penmanship, however, in 1899 he received the LL.B. degree from Georgetown University Law School in 1900 the LL.M. from Columbian (now George Washington) University, in 1901 the D.C.L. from George Washington School of Diplomacy and Comparative Jurisprudence.

To Bar in 1899

Appropriately, Peyser, who was admitted to the District Bar in June 1899, in his first case was linked with an old Washington institution—the Willard Hotel. Peyser represented S. N. Meyer, who was occupying premises—about where the Occidental Restaurant is now, Peyser believes—of which the Willard people wished to regain possession.

In the lucrative years that have followed, Peyser has participated in many cases involving prominent names, but the incident of which he is most proud involves another periodic Washington problem—housing.

During World War I he served with the rank of captain as Chief of the Housing and Health Division, detailed to the Office of Secretary of War. Incident to this work, he was instrumental in having an emergency rent control law enacted for the District.

Won in High Court

When the constitutionality of law was contested, Peyser carried the fight to the Supreme Court of the United States and won.

"It was the first case involving Government control of rents ever known," said Peyser, "perhaps in the whole world. It was a new idea."

Peyser, "colonel" now, maintained his reserve status with the Army until several years ago, and took an active part in American Legion activities and is a former District department commander of it.

Professional, business and outside activities have made Peyser's life a busy one. In addition to his law practice with son-in-law, Aaron W. Jacobson, he is chairman of the Security Savings & Commercial Bank; president of R. Harris and Co., jewelers; treasurer of Judd & Detweiler, Inc., and other business activities. He is a former member of the District school board, former president of the District Bar Association and charter member of the United Nations League of Lawyers.

Looks at Law

Looking at the law, after a half century's practice, Peyser believes that young lawyers today should be taught a great deal more about business and be expert in accounting.

Thinking of Washington, he believes "the public schools have very much deteriorated because of the lack of appropriations to take care of the teaching force. But we have very much improved in colleges and universities."

Dillon

W. Roy Dillon, chief of the administration division of the Interior Department's Fish and Wildlife Service is one of nine Federal Government employes who will celebrate the end of 1949 by retiring from service.

Dillon, 59, of 317 N. Thomas st., Arlington, is a native of Catlettsburg, Ky. He started his Government service in 1912 with the Department of Agriculture's Bureau of Animal Industry. He served in World War I and was then assigned as executive assistant to the chief United States game warden.

Former Newspaperman

John H. Stephenson of 3211 Central ave. ne., will retire from the Bureau of Plant Industry in the Agriculture Department today after nearly 38 years in its information service.

Stephenson, a former newspaperman, is a native of Quebec, Canada, and a direct descendant of Barbara Heck, one of the founders of Methodism in America. An enthusiast on equipment and strategy in fire fighting, Stephenson last year was made an honorary member of the District of Columbia Fire Department.

3 Sewer Jobs Contracted

The Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission yesterday awarded contracts totaling nearly $260,000 for three sewerage and water projects to be included in a projected seven-million-dollar construction program in nearby Maryland.

Major project in the group provides for construction of a 6550-foot, 24-inch trunk sewer in Cabin John Valley from Booth's Creek to the Chesapeake & Ohio Canal in Montgomery County. The contract was awarded yesterday to W. F. Wilson & Sons, Inc., of Brookeville, Md., low bidder at $218,873.

Sanitary Commission officials said the work on the sewer line would start in January, with completion expected by the end of July.

A $40,119.25 contract was awarded to Leo Butler Co. of Silver Spring, Md., for construction of an outfall sewer along the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad line at Branchville rd. to serve the community of Hollywood in Prince Georges County. The commission did not specify dates for beginning of construction or its expected completion.

The third contract awarded yesterday was for construction of 460 feet of 6-, 8- and 10-inch water lines in Claymore ave., Rosemary la. and Hitching Post la. in the Riggs Mill district of Prince Georges County. The award went to Nickles Bros. of Hyattsville, low bidder with a $5194.80 estimate.

Turkeys in Good Supply Here

New Year's Day menu planners will find turkeys still in good supply in the local stores which are also featuring hams and pork roast for the holiday trade.

While some types of turkeys are a shade lower in price at one or two stores than they were for the Christmas trade, customers at most stores will find the same prices they paid last week.

Other meat, poultry and dairy items were generally unchanged. Egg prices are still relatively low.

Vegetables continued plentiful, and a few, such as tomatoes, lima beans, broccoli and celery were slightly lower.

Among the fruits, pears were featured by the Department of Agriculture in its most-plentiful foods list. Florida citrus growers, on the other hand, are holding back shipments of oranges this week in an attempt to maintain prices.

Foods listed by the department as likely to be most plentiful, and therefore "good buys," for January, included apples, cranberries, oranges, winter pears, tangerines, dried prunes, raisins, nuts.

Recollections of A Nine-Day Celebrity

By Douglas Cater
(Reprinted from the magazine, The Reporter)

ONE SUNDAY morning not long ago I picked up the New York Herald Tribune and saw the unforgettable face of former Maj. George Racey Jordan. I read the major's charges that secret American documents and atomic-bomb materials had been uown to Russia with the connivance of Harry Hopkins. I read that a congressional committee was going to start looking into the charges next day, and that the press and radio were heralding the fissioning of another first-class spy investigation. The pattern of accusation and denial seemed familiar. But—and here lay the cause for my surprise—so was the face. This time my old friend, the major, was making the accusations.

Putting down the paper, I thought back to the sunny fall day in 1944 when I went to a Harvard Club luncheon at the Annapolis Hotel in Washington, D. C., to meet and hear Major Jordan for the first time. The Government agency for which I worked was interested in Russian matters, and had sent me to find out what he had to say. I remembered the powerfully built man in uniform, with a massive head, a jutting, freckled forehead, thinning, reddish hair slicked straight back, and a rather nasal, but convincing voice.

He talked about the Lend-Lease pipeline to Moscow that went through Great Falls, Mont., and Fairbanks, Alaska, to ferry planes and equipment to our ally. He described the Battle of Stalingrad so vividly that I got the false impression he had been there.

At the end of Jordan's speech the old Harvard alumni stood and cheered this non-Harvard man. There was a war to win, and, by golly, we were winning.

* * * *

BUT NOW, in December, 1949, the major was telling a new and strange story about what went through the Moscow pipeline. He appeared before the House Un-American Activities Committee on December 5 and made his charges under oath. The next day, at one of the largest press conferences ever held in New York, he provided banner headlines for the afternoon papers with his story of a radar-equipped C-47 going to Russia despite his efforts to get the radar removed.

As the days passed and the major piled one expose on top of another, I began to reconstruct the incidents of our somewhat unusual acquaintance.

Not long after the Harvard Club speech, I had called upon him at his office in the Union Trust Building. There we discussed his dealings with the Russians, but he didn't add anything new. The major was quite excited about a business he had just entered. His partner, a manufacturer's representative in Washington was, he said, making so much money that he had wired the major to come down from Great Falls, get out of uniform, and pitch in. Leaning back in his chair, the major told me enthusiastically that his part of the concern would soon be the tail that wagged the dog. He had already lined up five or six manufacturers who were paying him monthly retainers plus commissions to sell their products to the Russians. He assured me that he had excellent contacts with some of the top men in the Soviet Purchasing Commission. Opening a catalogue on his desk, he showed me the picture of a machine he was offering the Russions. They would need vast numbers of these in their postwar reconstruction program, he said. Of course, they wanted stripped-down models without the chrome and other ornaments.

I WONDERED THEN how the major had been able to get out of the Air Corps in the middle of the war, but I didn't ask him. His confidence about postwar trade with Russia seemed to jibe with predictions made by many Russian experts, in and out of worthwhile business, and to me, a 21-year-old, lwo-paid civil servant on the lookout for a new job after the war, the major looked loke a valuable man to know.

During the next months I saw a great deal of the major. Several times I arranged to introduce him to friends who were working on Russian matters in various parts of the Government. On one occasion, I invited a colonel from the Pentagon and a young attorney working on Lend-Lease to have lunch with the major and me at the Hay-Adams House. Though their names are fresh in my memory, I see no reason to drag them into the present melee, where any connection with the Roosevelt Administration, the Russians, or the war effort is pounced upon by certain segments of the press.

This particular luncheon took place around the middle of December, 1944, a good many months after the major had gotten to Washington and set himself up in business. It was a pleasant affair; the major, as always, was a delightful raconteur. This may have been the time he told the story of opening a Russian diplomatic pouch to find out what in blazes they were sending through in such bulk. He told of finding great quantities of publications—Department of Agriculture Bulletins, mail-order catalogues, etc. The point of his story was that the Russians had an insatiable urge to learn everything about us so that they could catch up. If he suspected then that "secret" classification markings had been clipped off the documents as he has recently charged, he did not say so. It was a good story, but in no sense a shocker.

ONCE, HOWEVER, in the living room of the major's Washington home, which he shared with his second wife, Mona Gardner, the major told me a version of the radar story. It was an exciting narrative about planes coming through Great Falls bound for Russia with radar aboard. He had held them up and ordered the radar taken out. The incident lost some of its dramatic quality when the major added that radar was subsequently made available to the Russians. But it was a tale worth listening to over a brandy.

Months later—it was the spring of 1945—the major told me that he was having no luck selling goods to the Russians. It seemed that they regarded manufacturers' representatives much as they regarded ornaments on machinery—as something they could do without. But the major wasn't discouraged. He said he had a new project in mind and he wanted me to go in on it. His idea was to start a news-letter for American businessmen interested in selling goods to the Russians. The letter would give hints about what the Russians might want to purchase. For example, if they were restoring the streetcar system in Kiev, or had developed an induction-coil railroad in Moscow, the American businessman would pay to find out. Together we prepared a list of the available unclassified sources of information about Soviet economic developments—a rather meager compilation that contained a few sources the New York Times didn't rely on regularly. The major seemed certain that the scheme was good, telling me he had published a news-letter for businessmen once before.

That summer, with the war in Europe ended and my office beginning to cut operations, the major and I went to New York to try to sell the scheme to a rather celebrated public relations counselor, whom Jordan said was an old friend. The publicist listened to us briefly and appeared totally uninterested. For a couple of weeks afterward, the major seemed to believe that we would get a favorable response any day. But no word came, and he finally ceased to talk about it.

* * * *

I DIDN'T SEE THE MAJOR for a long time after that. It was January, 1946, when I bumped into him on 15th st. nw., and he told me that he was working for a soybean flour corporation. He said his company had an exclusive process for treating soybean flour to prevent spoiling, that Herbert Hoover himself was interested in its use for the starving people of Europe and Asia, and that his company would get a cut on every bag sold. The major was as enthusiastic as ever.

I didn't see him again for almost three years. One morning in December a year ago, I found him eating breakfast at Marco Polo's, a restaurant on 42d st. near Third ave. He introduced me to his new wife, a large, friendly woman, who, I learned from the newspaper clipping he showed me, was a countess.

A day or so later I met him eating breakfast alone at Marco Polo's. He told me that he was negotiating the merger of the soybean company with a larger outfit, whose name he didn't mention. If I wanted to make some quick money, he suggested, I should buy some stock from him. I checked with a friend who worked for an investment firm. He reported back that one of their brokers quoted the stock at a price far below Jordan's.

According to newspaper accounts, last spring the major joined the American Pacific Industrial Corp. of 70 East 45th st., as assistant to the president. The publicity release said that Major Jordan was formerly "United Nations Representative to the Soviet Union." The major later explained to the press that the Allies were frequently called the United Nations during the war.

The major's behavior when I first knew him in Washington was not that of a man who had been "yelling his head off about what was going on" and "doing everything I could to obstruct the Russians." Instead, he set himself up to do business with the Russians and boasted of his friendly relations with them.

BEFORE THE HOUSE Un-American Activities Committee, he testified under oath: "I went to to Washington and walked up and down the corridors of the State Department trying to find someone who would tell me that they (the suitcases) had diplomatic immunity. . . . I saw a John Hazard, the chief of the entire outfit, and he told me that everything was known in Washington and they understood thoroughly what was going on and there was't anything for me to worry about." John Hazard was not chief of anything in the State Department at that time: He was deputy director of the Soviet branch of Lend-Lease—not connected in any way with diplomatic pouches. He has said he does not recall having spoken to Major Jordan in Washington.

At his press conference nezt day, the major stated: "I don't remember who I went to—John Hazard's office among others."

General Gaffney, the major's superior officer, told the press that the reports were a complete surprise to him, and Colonel Gitzinger, who supposedly ordered the ripping out of the radar, does not recall it. It has begun to look as if no one can confirm the major.

I was even more certain of this on Thursday, December 8, when I went to lunch at Bleeck's, a newspapermen's restaurant on West 40th st., New York. Walking toward the back of the restaurant I felt someone grab my arm, and turning I saw the major sitting with two other men. I commented on his prominence in the news.

"Yeah," he said, "but they don't seem to believe me. You remember my telling you about all this, don't you?"

"Only a part of it, major," I answered. "Only a part."

SUDDENLY HE GREW excited. "Say," he asked, "who was that fellow in Lend-Lease you introduced me to?"

I named the young attorney who had been one of the luncheon companions at the Hay-Adams House.

"That's right! I've been trying to think of his name. I guess I was mistaken about talking to Hazard. That fellow must have been the one I talked to."

The instant I named my friend who used to work for Lend-Lease I regretted it. Of course, his name may never come up. On the other hand, the major desperately seeking someone to substantiate his story, may drag him into the investigation. If he is ever called up, he will try to think back to his life in Washington as a minor official in Lend-Lease, not even remotely connected with diplomatic pouches, radar sets or atomic bombs. He may vaguely remember a congenial former major whom he met one day at lunch. Perhaps he will even remember that the major was an excellent story-teller who talked of experiences with the Russians in Great Falls, Mont. But try as he may I don't think he'll be able to remember that the major gave him a report, official or otherwise, of grave misdemeanors involving the personal aide of the President. He, like all others, will undoubtedly deny it.

Mrs. Roosevelt Stands Fast To Tent Story

Logan, W. Va., Dec. 29 (AP).—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt refused today to change her story that Logan County coal miners once had to live in tents, "because it is the exact truth."

Mrs. Roosevelt wrote in reply to a letter from Fred Haislip, president of the Logan Chamber of Commerce, asking for apologies from McCall's magazine and Harper and Co., publishers of her memoirs "This I Remember."

The widow of the President wrote in her book that Logan miners had been living in tents because they were evicted from their homes, the men blacklisted at the mines and unable to get work.

Haislip said "her statement that such conditions existed here" is not true.

"This is a good many years ago, you must remember," Mrs. Roosevelt replied "and I do not question that you have all forgotten there ever did exist people who lived in tents . . ."

Mrs. Roosevelt took the occasion of her reply to praise the president of the United Mine Workers. "I have said many times that John L. Lewis' leadership was strong because he had led the unions in obtaining benefits when no one else had the vision or the understanding to really be helpful."

Severe Quake Rocks Luzon; Towns Cut Off

Manila, Dec. 29 (AP).—A severe earthquake did damage throughout the main Philippine island of Luzon today.

Few casualties were reported, but several towns about 150 to 175 miles northeast of Manila were isolated by landslides. A full tabulation will require days.

Three sharp shocks, beginning at 11:05 a. m. and lasting 2½ minutes, were recorded in Manila. The intensity here was rated at five, on a scale of nine, but was estimated at seven in Ilagan, 175 miles northeast.

Throughout the island, frightened persons swarmed into the open as buildings cracked and chunks of maosnry and plaster rained down. Almost every large community on the island reported some damage.

At least five large downtown Manila buildings had gaping cracks in their walls. Even concrete-and-steel structures showed damage.

Near Ilagan, the Manila Bulletin's correspondent reported a jeep fell into a fissure and an unidentified woman was drowned.

Woman Injured By Speeding Young Cyclist

Pedaling his Christmas bicycle at a rapid clip, a 7-year-old boy yesterday rammed into a woman and her young son, causing the woman a possible fractured right ankle, police reported.

Injured was Mrs. Norma Willoughby, 27, a resident of Oak Grove trailer court, Richmond hwy., Alexandria. Mrs. Willoughby and her son, Gerald, were taken to Fort Belvoir, where she was admitted.

Police said the accident occurred about 2 p. m. as Mrs. Willoughby and son walked on the sidewalk in Jefferson Manor shopping center, Alexandria.

The bicyclist, they said, continued after the accident to his home, where he informed his mother of the mishap. Police, who said the youngster will not be charged, declined to give his name.

Needy Arlington Families Due for Cut in Aid

"Severe cuts" in public assistance payments to many families on Arlington relief rolls are in store, due to a new State welfare department directive, Arlington Welfare Director John Howell said yesterday.

The State order, effective January 1, 1950, in new cases and July 1, 1950, in all cases, establishes ceilings on rent allowances for the first time, according to Howell.

Maximum payments for rent, including fuel and utilities, will range from $30 monthly for one or two persons to a $50-a-month top for families of "six persons or more," under the new order.

Present payments are unrestricted and cover a family's rent at "the most moderately priced" home they can find, Howell explained.

He said the maximums are "completely unrealistic" for urban areas such as Arlington, pointing out that rental costs alone average about $50 a month in the county for public assistance clients.

"There just isn't any housing available at those prices," Howell said.

The new order will also affect Alexandria's relief rolls, according to Miss Barbara Watkins, welfare director, who estimated rents average roughly $40 a month in the city for welfare families. Both she and Howell said a more definite estimate of the order's effect will not be available for several weeks.

St. Elizabeths Patient Balked In Bridge Leap

An alert Air Force sergeant yesterday prevented a probable suicide leap from the 11th st. se. bridge by an escaped St. Elizabeths patient.

Hazel

The soldier, T/Sergt. William E. Baer, Bolling Air Force Base, was driving over the bridge en route from Washington at 3:30 p. m. when he noticed a dishevelled, unshaven man poised on a ledge outside the railing.

The man, later identified as Wesley H. Hazel, 30, had removed his topcoat and suitcoat and held them in his arm as he peered down on the Anacostia River 24 feet below.

Hazel was heedless of Baer's shouted inquiry so the latter leaped from his car and grabbed the man's arm.

Meantime, an unidentified Army lieutenant stopped his own car, joined Baer and the two of them hauled Hazel back over the guard rail.

Baer and the lieutenant stopped a passing radio cab and the driver notified police.

Police took Hazel to No. 11 police precinct. Later he was returned to St. Elizabeths. Police said he wandered away from the institution earlier in the day.

Fairfax Group Seeks Change In Government

The Fairfax County Civic Federation yesterday began active steps toward gaining a referendum on a county manager government for the county.

R. A. Osborne, chairman of the federation's governmental affairs committee, announced members of his group have begun circulating petitions seeking the referendum. Some 1500 signatures are required, he said.

According to Osborne, of Route 2, Falls Church, it is thought that county manager government would bring about a saving in tax money and give citizens a stronger voice in the county's affairs.

Under the proposed system, the posts of Commonwealth's attorney, sheriff and court clerk would be the only elective officers. The county treasurer and commissioner of revenue, now elected, would be eliminated.

County supervisors would be chosen by county-wide vote from six magisterial districts instead of by wards; the school board would be appointed by the board of supervisors; and appointment of county surveyor and coroner by the Circuit Court would be ended.

Osborne also reported that information on the county manager form of government and reasons for it would be made available to residents soon.

profit from all work secured by me."

Parker said he turned down the deal. Alexander later said he was referring to buildings outside the Freedom Fair itself, but Parker told The Washington Post he and Alexander had never discussed any buildings other than the main "U. S. A." structures at the Fair.

Alexander, whose partners say he now owns only 7½ percent of the leasing bureau stock, refused to tell The Washington Post to whom or how he disposed of the rest of his interest. At one point he declared the stock was in his wife's name. Later he contradicted himself, declaring his wife had no stock. Then he said he himself had no interest whatsoever in the leasing agency.

Leasing Right Given by Barron

The agency was given the right to lease space by Barron last July.

In his letter to McGrath, Barron, who is now in Florida, said the commission is anxious to have the matter thoroughly investigated "to determine the truth of those charges, to determine whether other such offers have been made and whether the laws of the United States have been violated thereby."

Alexander was one of four men who originally set up the leasing agency. Majority control of the voting stock has since passed to Leo Bernstein, local real estate agent. President of the agency is attorney Joseph B. Danzansky.

Tall Story Collectors Swap Tales

What's your favorite tall tale?

This question was asked yesterday of several of the country's leading collectors of whoppers, in town for the annual meeting of the American Folklore Society at the Library of Congress. They came up with these:

Dr. Harold W. Thompson, professor of English at Cornell University and president of the New York Folklore Society, author of "Body, Boots and Britches:"

"Old Bill, Adirondacks trapper, went to his cabin in the mountains one night and it was so cold the flames on his two candles froze. He immediately hurried down to the nearest settlement, Utica, a city of 100,000 souls, bought all the candles he could find and took them up to camp. He lighted the candles, waited until the flames froze, then packed all the flames in little boxes, took them back to Utica and sold them as fresh strawberries."

Dr. Mody C. Boatright, professor of English at the University of Texas and secretary of the Texas Folklore Society:

"In a West Texas duststorm a man was riding along and saw a prairie dog 20 feet in the air—digging like hell to get back in his hole."

B. A. Botkin, author of "Treasury of American Folklore": "An Idaho farmer had bad luck raising turnips so he started raising Idaho potatoes. When the potatoes were ready for harvest the farmer went over to a CCC camp to sell some. The CCC commandant said he would like to order a hundred pounds. The farmer hesitated, then said he didn't know whether or not he wanted to cut one of his potatoes in two."

Duncan Emrich, head of the Library of Congress' folklore division:

"Jim Bridger, a trapper in the Yellowstone area, fired at an elk at a range of 30 feet. The elk didn't bat an eye. Bridger fired second and third shots. Still nothing happened. Infuriated, Bridger rushed at the elk to beat it with his gun. He ran smack into a glass mountain. Not only was the mountain glass. It was also telescopic and the elk at which Bridger had been shooting was 30 miles away."

Herbert Halpert of Murray State College (Kentucky): "On the Alaska Highway, the mosquitoes were so big that once when one came in for a landing at an airbase the ground crew put 39 gallons of aviation gas in it before they realized it wasn't a P-38."

Miss Gayton Named Folklore Society Head

Ann Gayton, professor of anthropology at the University of New Mexico, yesterday was elected president of the American Folklore Society, concluding its sixty-first annual meeting at the Library of Congress.

The society selected Robert W. Gordon of Washington as its first American honor member. The honor came for Gordon's work as founder of the Archive of American Folk Song at the Library.

New officials chosen by the society included Louis Jones, director of the New York Historical Association, first vice-president; William Fenton, Smithsonian Institution ethnologist, second vice-president, and MacEdwar Leach, professor of English at the University of Pennsylvania, secretary-treasurer.

Next general meeting of the society will be at the University of Indiana at Bloomington July 28 and 29.

"Ethnic American Folklore" was discussed at yesterday's session. Speakers included Harold W. Thompson of Cornell University, discussing "Lore of the New York Dutch"; Alfred L. Shoemaker of Franklin and Marshall College.

Maryland Sets Road-Building Budget Mark

Baltimore Dec. 29 (AP).—Maryland's road bill soared further to new highs today, after the awarding of contracts which boosted the year's total to $56,123,549.

The commission broke an all-time record yesterday by letting contracts for 18 road and bridge projects amounting to $13,447,900. This was twice the amount the State spent in a normal year for road work before the war.

The total for the year does not include work on the Chesapeake Bay bridge. This comes under a different heading. Neither does it include the millions of dollars of work on small road sections and maintenance work carried on by day-to-day employes and prison forces.

Yesterday's figure would have been larger by $2,320,432, but the three projects costing that much lacked formal rights-of-way clearance. They are being carried over to next year's program.

Contracts let at the record-breaking session included:

A 4.6-mile section of divided highway on the new Route 240, the Washington National Turnpike linking Frederick and the District of Columbia.

A 3.3-mile stretch of Routes 5 and 301 in Prince Georges and Charles Counties.

Yes, you can say that again! That's a good New Year's resolution to put into effect right now.

Everyone knows that driving is dangerous enough both on the open road and in city traffic . . . and especially so on holiday weekends.

So be safe and sensible on New Year's Eve. When a genial friend says, "Come on, pal, have one for the road," be sure you say, "MAKE MINE COFFEE!"

For coffee gives you a clearer head and clearer eyes for driving. Coffe makes you more alert for quicker reactions. Coffee doesn't let you dow

High Court Voids N. Y. City Rent Law

Albany, N. Y., Dec. 29. (U.P.)—The State's highest court today declared invalid the Sharkey rent law which permitted New York City to modify Federal rent control regulations.

The Court of Appeals held that the city statute infringed on the State constitution but expressed no opinion on the contention of Federal attorneys that the statute conflicted with the National Rent Act and the Federal Constitution.

A court attache said the decision was "final" since the U. S. Supreme Court could not intervene in a case involving only the State constitution. The decision could have been appealed to the higher court if the State tribunal had ruled on arguments involving the Federal Constitution.

Chief Judge John T. Loughran, writing the unanimous opinion, held that the city law violated section 83 of the Civil Practice Act, which regulates summary proceedings in courts of record. It is under this section that eviction proceedings usually are brought.

The Sharkey law prohibited eviction unless first approved by the New York City Housing Commission.

Loughran held that the law "imposed additional restrictions upon the right of a landlord to evict a tenant from an apartment . . ."

"The local law is, therefore, inconsistent with article 83 of the Civil Practices Act and in that respect runs foul of the limitations laid down by . . . the home rule amendment of the State constitution."

The decision reversed a Municipal Court order dismissing an eviction petition against Louis Goodman, a tenant, brought by F.T.B. Corp., landlord.

Attorneys for Housing Expediter Tighe Woods entered the case in a surprise move to argue that the city law was "in conflict" with Federal statute and that it "might prove productive of harm to landlord and tenant" alike.

Toward Stability

Europe's Fate In Own Hands, Black Says

Charlottesville, Va., Dec. 29 (AP).—World Bank President Eugene R. Black says a stable and prosperous world economy can be achieved if the people of the world recognize that their fate lies in their own hands.

Writing in the winter, 1950, issue of the Virginia Quarterly Review, Black says:

"If European economy is not to remain balanced on a knife's edge, there must be a more determined attack on the cause of the present lack of stability.

"Unless the United States makes sure that Europeans take the approaching end of European recovery aid seriously, the European effort during the next three years is bound to suffer. Europeans must be left in no doubt that the American people do not need to give away their substance in order to be prosperous and will not support indefinitely those who refuse to help themselves.

"There is no reason why all the things that must be done to achieve the aims of the Marshall Plan could not be done in the next three years. We must realize, however, that they will depend more on human responses which we can influence than on material factors which we cannot."

Black, a vice president of the Chase National Bank in New York before he became associated with the World Bank in 1947, sees no reason for pessimism in the slow progress of undeveloped countries toward coming to grips with their own problems. He believes the strong desire for economic betterment in backward areas is one of the greatest driving forces of our times, and if directed into constructive channels can achieve miracles and revolutionize world economy."

The International Bank, supporting President Truman's aid for those backward areas, is, according to Black, "one of the most promising avenues of approach ever explored.

Winners were Mrs. Joseph G. Motyka, 1343 Madison st. nw., and her 12-year-old daughter, Faye, both represented by Attorney Joseph D. Bulman. Defendant was Raymond Walter Burton, 25, of Burtonsville.

Mrs. Motyka suffered a sprained ankle and bruises, and the accident may have caused her to have a miscarriage, according to the suit. The daughter had chipped and broken teeth and a cut tongue. Mrs. Motykin's husband, driver of their automobile, was uninjured.

Illegal Whisky Owner Fined; His Jug-Sharer Freed

An Arlington man was fined $50 and costs yesterday by County Court Judge Hugh Reid, for possessing illegal whisky.

He is Charles K. Bowles, 4719 N. 17th rd., Arlington, arrested December 23 in a vacant lot in the 4900 block of Lee hwy. with a jug of "moonshine" whisky.

Found innocent of a similar charge was Gilbert Moten of 2116 N. Culpepper st., Arlington, arrested with Bowles. Judge Reid ruled the whisky was actually Bowles', despite the fact that Moten was taking a swig, according to police, when picked up.

D. C. Woman, 32, Held in $1500 on Numbers Charge

A 32-year-old Washington woman was arrested yesterday and charged with operating a lottery and possession of lottery slips.

She was Mrs. Edna Roberta Curtis, of 321 15th st. se., who was taken into custody after police undercovermen had made several "plays" with her.

Police, armed with a search warrant, reported they recovered marked money and numbers slips at her home after the arrest.

Mrs. Curtis was taken before Commissioner Cyril S. Lawence, who continued the case until January 4 and set bond at $1500.

Youthful Victim Of Leukemia Back In Hospital Again

Seven-year-old Jerry Moser, who rallied sufficiently from acute leukemia to spend Christmas at home, was back in Alexandria Hospital yesterday in very poor condition.

Hospital officials reported the boy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank M. Moser, 802 South View ter., Alexandria, received another blood transfusion yesterday—the third in two days. His physician has said the disease has cut his life expectancy to a matter of months.

Unaware of the nature of his illness, the boy spent most of Monday riding the new bicycle he received as a Christmas present, Mrs. Moser said.

Leg Irons

The capture of an escaped Virginia convict in Washington serves to illustrate the fact that medieval penal methods are still in use close to the Nation's Capital. The convict, who fled a prison camp near Haymarket, is quoted as saying: "I could take five years of jail standing on my head, but I couldn't take those leg shackles." No one should hold any brief for this particular prisoner, who appears to be an exceedingly bad actor; but the use of shackles as a means of restraining men working on road gangs is certainly a barbarous and inhuman relic.

In common with a number of States, Virginia uses convict labor on certain types of public improvements. By itself this is a forward-looking policy which accomplishes useful work and at the same time gives prisoners necessary exercise. Although the old-time chain gang has been done away with, however, Virginia still uses light leg chains during the day on all prisoners working outdoors except trusties; and at night prisoners in temporary camps are fettered to a heavy "bull chain."

The trend in Virginia is away from this deplorable practice, but the fact that it exists at all is shocking. The answer, of course, is better road camps and more guards. North Carolina, for example, maintains a series of permanent barracks all over the State where road gangs can be adequately guarded. Virginia has begun a similar system, but the program needs to be speeded. If convict labor is to be used on roads, the first essential obviously is that the public be protected against escapes. But Virginia residents also have an interest in seeing that their penal system is a device for rehabilitation rather than torture.

Shotgun Respect

Press censorship in Latin America is not new, but the systematic stamping out of every vestige of opposition, as now seen in Argentina, is a totalitarian importation. It is a measure of the haunting insecurity of the dictatorial mind that President Peron can tolerate no free circulaton of ideas even when the legislature and the courts are heavily stacked. After smothering dissidents among the provincial press he has now turned his big guns again on the Buenos Aires dailies, La Prensa and La Nacion, which he accuses of the new crime of "disrespect."

These metropolitan journals so far have withstood every hindrance Peron could contrive, from imposed wage increases to constriction of newsprint. Whether they can survive the "desacato" suits is another question, for Peron has a lead-pipe cinch against their editors. Their crime is that they printed the charges of an opposition deputy that Peron had enriched himself in office. This, in Peron's view, makes them accessories to the "disrespect."

Peron may succeed in eliminating "disrespect" (in print) by force within Argentina, but he will assuredly increase the disrespect elsewhere.

Screening DPs

There is not the slightest evidence in the record to support Senator Pat McCarran's recent charge that the Displaced Persons Commission is "paying too little attention to security" in admitting refugees to the United States. As the chairman of the commission, Ugo Carusi, observed, "if we have been unduly careless I should think we would have heard about it. Thus far official notice of subversive activity among the new Americans has been practically nil." The same is true so far as criminal offenses are concerned. The DPs who have come here since the program began a year and a half ago have been obliged to live, for the most part, under close and constant scrutiny.

The security measures employed under the Displaced Persons Act far exceed those applied in any other immigration program. They involve at least seven major security protective checks in addition to all normal immigration requirements. And all doubts about an applicant for admission under the DP program are resolved in favor of American security. The Counterintelligence Corps of the United States Army conducts an additional screening in Germany and Austria by personal interview, checking with neighbors of the applicant and referring to Nazi Party files. Then the application is reviewed by the European headquarters office. There are special laboratories set up to examine documents relating to eligibility. There is a special additional investigation of all applicants who come from countries overrun by the Communists. And when the DP Commission gets all through with an application it is double checked both abroad and at home by the Immigration and Naturalization Service; and finally an individual check is made on each DP by the FBI.

With all this care, the chance undoubtedly remains that a few undesirables will slip through. But the risk seems an extremely slight one, heavily overweighed by the importance of making an equitable American contribution to settlement of the tragic DP problem. And the men and women who come here seeking liberation and opportunity will contribute much, as immigrants have done throughout our history, to the growth and enrichment of the American community.

Pivot Of Asia

The President has put the right man in the right place at the right time in naming Mr. Merle Cochran as the first Ambassador to the United States of Indonesia. Mr. Cochran was the American member of the Good Offices Committee of the United Nations. In this role he showed a gift for mediation as notable as any in our experience except that of Mr. Cyrus Ching in the field of labor disputes. He is, as a mediator should be, thoroughly self-effacing, is never ruffled even when he has lost a battle for peace, is extraordinarily modest, and has the patience of Job. This combination makes Mr. Cochran stand out in a profession which has assumed extraordinary significance in this day of American leadership in world affairs.

The Indonesians themselves did not wait to be asked, in accepted diplomatic style, whether Mr. Cochran was persona grata. They asked for him. For they knew, as the rest of the world does, that Mr. Cochran was the midwife of their new state. They had wanted to put up a statue of him for his services. They desisted only when Mr. Cochran, with the dry humor which is one of his characteristics, asked them to defer the honor on the grounds that the work would cost them too much so long as he retained his present girth. An ample man and a portly is Mr. Cochran, with a determination always to reduce a waistline that probably stays put because of his imperturbability.

The appointment of Mr. Cochran is of immense significance to the United States in its world affairs. The revolt in Asia against the colonial system may perhaps come to be regarded in history as the greatest political phenomenon of these momentous times. Indonesia is situated in the very center of this witches' cauldron. It has great riches and great potentialities. It is a bastion against an enchroachment of communism the end of which has not yet been seen in Asia. For all these reasons Indonesia needs to be considered, and is apparently being considered, as the pivot of American foreign policy in Asia. Certainly free Indonesia is the only sign so far that America has something to offer in Asia besides help to Asian reactionaries, and their American pensioners, defenders of the colonial system, and warlords doing their stuff in the best stylized fashion of the Chinese stage. Indonesia starts out with good men and true in its tremendous task of turning from war to peace and reconstruction. Of them all, Premier Hatta has mettle and ability, and he shares with Mr. Cochran a love of Lincoln.

It is a thousand pities that Indonesia did not get its independence at the same time as India. Hatta's job of keeping his country free has been rendered the more difficult by its belatedness. Communists and Muslim fanatics have declared war on the venture. But with faith, with American good will and American works, with Mr. Cochran's sage counsel, Indonesia will find a secure place in the world family as an independent and successful entity. It is a calculated risk that in terms of world strategy is an American must.

Morse Code

Senator Morse has given the proper answer to the sort of caterwauling on foreign policy set off by Senator Wherry. Mr. Wherry's declared unwillingness to accept future commitments "made by bipartisan bigwigs" was, of course, a sideswipe at the efforts of Senator Vandenberg and others to put national interest above party advantage. Senator Morse correctly termed this attack "a cloak behind which is hidden the weapon of isolationism."

This is not to say that the arrangements under which the bipartisan policy has operated have been perfect. Too often the Administration has been guilty of presenting policy as a fait accompli without advance consultation. The failure of the State Department to make a serious effort to get the views of members of Congress who have visited the Far East is one current example. The names of a few Republicans in United Nations posts do not atone for such neglect. For while the actual formulation and execution of foreign policy is an executive responsibility, congressional assent is usually necessary to put flesh on the bones.

But the guillotine is a poor cure for dandruff. The admitted deficiencies of bipartisanship in foreign affairs are no excuse for junking or sabotaging it, as Senator Wherry would do, by endless political debate. "The shortcomings which have developed," as Senator Morse says, "simply point out the need for perfecting the application of the principle of bipartisan foreign policy, instead of destroying the principle."

It would be difficult to prove that the bipartisan policy has in any way inhibited members of either party from speaking out when they were in disagreement. Senator Wherry in particular has sounded off with regularity. There is no implication that the opposition party must become a rubber stamp. Rather, Mr. Morse asserts, foreign policy must be kept "high above the level of partisan politics, so that we may remain a united people in all our efforts to meet the threat of Russian totalitarianism." Or, as Senator Connally said yesterday, what is needed is not separate Republican and Democratic foreign policies, but one American foreign policy.

What this means is that there must be advance agreement as to what our interests are respecting foreign affairs and how they can best be advanced. This can be done through the medium of consultations between the State Department and members of the Foreign Affairs Committees. There is room here for considerable fence-mending by the State Department. But it would be a great misfortune for the Republicans no less than the Democrats if the Republican drive on so-called "me-tooism" were to make foreign policy a melee of campaign propaganda. For the Russians, whose aggressive designs our foreign policy seeks to counter, tolerate no division on either aims or methods.

Plane Production

There is both optimism and challenge in the 1949 tally of the aircraft industry. In general, plane manufacturers will end the year with a moderate profit, which in itself is substantial progress over 1946 and 1947. Military plane production will run around 2500 units. This is only half the annual procurement recommended in the report of the President's Air Policy Commission at the end of 1947, but it is still sufficient to provide the basis for a reasonably healthy industry. Where the picture is dark is in the decline of civil transport production from 260 to 120 and of private planes from 7039 to 3400.

Although the military figure will not satisfy some air-power enthusiasts, the difference between it and the Air Policy Commission recommendation represents a calculated risk in which strictly military security is only one of several factors to be considered. Many military leaders have come to recognize the importance of a strong economy and stable Europe as factors bearing on military procurement. There is no question about the premier position of air power. The goal should be a relatively small striking force in balance with other components, and a level of purchases to permit fairly rapid expansion of production in emergency.

The preoccupation with strategical and tactical aircraft orders is, however, in one sense a weakness in the aircraft industry. Virtually no work is being done today on jet transports for either military or civilian use; the British are far ahead in this respect. The best military transports are still the C-97 and C-124, both conventional powered. Because of the cost involved in jet experimentation and the still precarious though improving position of the airlines, it is doubtful whether any manufacturer will undertake such experimentation for the civilian market alone. Nor will airlines order jets until they have been proved.

Here is one of the places where the interests of military and civil aviation coincide. It would be definitely to the advantage of the Air Force if a jet transport designed for military needs could be adapted for civilian use. The fact is that the Air Force leaned heavily on the civilian airlines during the war and would do so again. In this connection any lingering congressional thought of preventing the Air Force from using funds for development of planes that might have civilian use ought to be buried as unrealistic. If there are to be jet transports, it is apparent that the Air Force will have to lend a hand. Granted that present and prospective budgets are tight, it still ought to be possible to divert some funds for a jet transport prototype without, say, detracting from plans for more tactical jet bombers. For until there is a prototype, there will be no high-speed transport for either military or civilian needs.

Jack Lovelock

Dr. John Edward Lovelock, who fell accidentally to his death before a subway train in Brooklyn, N. Y., on Wednesday, was renowned in his youth as one of the greatest middle-distance runners of all time. When he died at the age of 39, he was an old man as an athlete but a young man in his chosen profession, medicine, in which he had already won distinction. From the directorship of the rehabilitation department of St. Bartholomew's Hospital in London, he had come two years ago to serve as assistant director of physical medicine at the Hospital for Special Surgery, Brooklyn. But, of course, it is for his Olympic triumphs and his world-record mile and 1500-meter runs that most Americans know and will remember him.

Jack Lovelock was an amateur athlete in the best tradition of the term. Although he was the greatest of milers in a period when he had great rivals, Glenn Cunningham and Bill Bonthron the most notable among them, he made running no more than an incident in his career. He was a match racer, rather than a seeker of records. His greatest victory came in the 1936 Olympics at Berlin when he led Cunningham and Eric Ny of Sweden to the finish of the 1500-meter final, all three of them under the previous world record for that distance. He was a Rhodes scholar studying medicine at the time; and shortly after his Olympic feat, he quit running and devoted himself to the profession that was the serious concern of his life. "We have lost a great competitor and a great sport," Glenn Cunningham commented on hearing of Lovelock's death. But perhaps his unrealized future would have been even brighter than his brilliant athletic past.

"Hasn't Changed Much, Has He?"

Voice Of Brotherhood

In his Christmas address, President Truman called on us to "dedicate ourselves anew to love of our fellow men." That is, to universal brotherhood, which loves "bad" brothers as well as "good" brothers, loves the Russian peoples, if not their rulers.

But, if we love the Russian peoples, as they deserve, and if we believe they were the first victims of their own government, why don't we tell them so, over and over, common man and woman to common man and woman?

No official "Voice of America" broadcasts can transmit such messages effectively. We need an unofficial Voice of Humanity, a Voice of Brotherhood. Call it simply BRO. Let it be "of the people" of America and other lands, and "for the people" of the Soviet republics, the other iron curtain countries, Red China, and whole reddening East. Let it speak from heart to heart in moving words and acts carrying conviction with them. Let it cross "closed" frontiers and enter "closed" minds, not only through short-wave broadcasts but by any and every means which imagination, ingenuity, and underground experience can devise. Let it "bootleg" truth about American prosperity, Western democracy and freedom, in the language of individual union laborites, farmers, small merchants, white collar workers.

Let it enlist the best organizers, publicity men, dramatists, and showmen of the free world, and leave no stone unturned in an all-out, persistent, tireless effort to make another world war impossible by convincing our "enemies" that we are more friendly to them than their own Politburo, ready and eager to help them secure the boundless fruits of peace whenever they get their eyes open and make clear to those over them that the long night of their own exploitation is at an end.

Let us give our dimes, dollars, and millions of dollars to finance the manifold activities of BRO, when it comes. And when the Kremlin has been checkmated, as it surely will be, we shall find 1001 other unbrotherly things to melt in the warmth of our outstretched hands and hearts.

Lawyers In Contempt

There is no right more basic under American law than that which grants to citizens accused of crime the free selection of counsel for their defense. I direct your attention to the increasing abrogation of this right, guaranteed under the sixth amendment of the Constitution.

Certain officials of the Communist Party were recently prosecuted in New York. The case, destined for ultimate resolution by the Supreme Court, raises questions of constitutional law as important as any to be decided in our generation. For more than a year, six defense lawyers have been working on the voluminous evidence involved. This fall, Judge Harold R. Medina announced that all six of them were guilty of contempt and would have to go to jail before they could prepare their clients' appeal.

In California, where the Government again is prosecuting labor leader Harry Bridges on substantially the same charges it previously failed to prove in court, Judge George B. Harris last month cited chief defense counsel Vincent Hallinan for contempt. He is likewise scheduled to be in jail while his client's case is being appealed.

Recently in New Jersey Judge Charles P. Hutchinson denied six Trenton Negroes the legal services of three Civil Rights Congress lawyers whose successful appeal to the State Supreme Court saved them from the electric chair and won them a retrial. Their only remaining attorney was warned he faces contempt proceedings.

A single incident of this sort might be attributable to actual misconduct by the defense attorneys, or to the isolated vindictiveness of some petty judicial tyrant. But such a series of arbitrary rulings must be regarded as a developing pattern by which whole sections of our population — Communists, Negroes, progressive labor leaders—would be stripped of legal guidance at the most critical stage of their prosecution.

British Health Plan

Ysabel Rennie in her December 25 article "Hints From British Health Plan" made many false and misleading statements.

In her article she began by writing that in the first year the British health plan cost 15 percent more than anticipated. Actually it cost better than 60 percent more than anticipated.

Next she states that both doctors and dentists have improved their income since the National Health Service went into effect. Again this is contrary to the known facts. She writes that those doctors suffering the most loss have been physicians with small but fashionable practice, when the truth is that the doctor serving sparsely settled rural areas—which the plan was supposed to help—have been the greatest sufferers. The famous Highland Medical Service in Scotland is a perfect example.

Finally, she states that the average consumer in our country spends almost as much for liquor and tobacco as he does for his health. Actually, in 1947, he spent 8 billion for liquor, 3 billion for cosmetics and 2 billion for medical care.

Symphony Conductor

It seems Raoul Berger's December 27 letter on Howard Mitchell is a perfect illustration of the old maxim, "The grass always looks greener in the other fellow's yard."

We must remember that Szell and Beecham did not overnight rise to impressive stature, either. If the young conductors of our generation are not given a chance, who will be conducting our orchestras 20 years from now?

Rather than acting hastily in reappointing Howard Mitchell, the board of directors of the National Symphony Orchestra acted wisely and showed their good faith in a conductor who has already done so much toward giving Washington a truly great orchestra together with the kind of music most of us want so desperately to hear.

As for great performances, few will forget the magnificent one of Moussorgsky's Pictures at an Exhibition," heard here last week under Mitchell—to mention just one. Until such time as there are no more performances such as we have been hearing lately, we hope Mr. Mitchell will be reappointed again and again.

Einstein's Law

When Professor Einstein reached into his well-worn hat and brought out a theory that there was one universal law which governs gravitation and other matters, he was not expounding anything new, as such a conclusion had been reached untold millenniums ago.

His mathematical formula developed to support his theory is somewhat reminiscent of a "trick" equation by which you can prove that 1 equals 8, 10, or in fact any other number. The joker is that the value of the key number of the equation is zero, or nothing. Therefore one nothing is equal to any number of nothings.

In propounding his theory of relativity and fourth dimension, Einstein was merely trying to account for something that had not been determined. Notwithstanding mathematical formulae used to try and prove the existence of a fourth dimension, it does not exist.

Since the theory of the fourth dimension was advanced, science has uncovered some of the things which had led Einstein to conclude there was such a dimension. The disclosure of the make-up of the atom has partially explained the "mystery" which Einstein concluded was a fourth dimension.

His latest theory as to the existence of a single force dealing with all material things is sound, but not new. It does not take either science or mathematics to prove this. Every phase of nature, whether on the earth or in the sky, provides ample proof. In the process of investigations into nuclear fission, it is clear that there is a single cosmic force in the atom besides neutrons, protons, and electrons. There is an undiscovered law which results in electrons being negatively charged, while protons are positively charged. It is also clear that atoms have a facility for combining in accordance with a natural law which has not as yet been discovered.

At any rate, while we have looked into the make-up of the atom, we have not as yet penetrated the curtain which conceals the cosmic force back of the atom, and which is the key to all nature.

Weapon For Commies

"Does it make any difference?" several persons asked me recently when I was circulating a petition to cemetery owners to stop their racial discrimination.

To our minority groups it is one of the factors involved in acceptance or rejection.

Unless we want to make it possible for our minorities to become happy hunting grounds for Communist organizers, we had better lose no time in giving them a square deal.

Nor should we overlook the fact that Russia is using our racism as a very effective weapon against us in all of the nonwhite world. What wonderful ammunition our Senators who filibuster against civil rights bills give to the Soviets! The latter immediately broadcast to Asia, Africa, Central and South America that we promoted the passage of the Declaration of Human Rights by the United Nations, but that now we hypocritically refuse to let it apply within our own country. Such propaganda, founded upon fact, is a powerful force in alienating from us the major part of the human race.

Economic View Of The Nation

By Marquis Childs

Politics In The Council

A GREAT deal of wrangling has gone on backstage over the series of reports which the President's Council of Economic Advisers is issuing on the state of the Nation's economy and the prospects for 1950. Directly at stake is the willingness of the public, on the one hand, and the professional economists and business analysts on the other hand, to continue to put credence in the council's reports.

From professional economists on the council's staff came most of the criticism. They are fearful that the original purpose in creating the council, which was to establish a group of experts who could objectively and dispassionately appraise the Nation's economic balance sheet, is being perverted.

It is not that they were necessarily in accord with the viewpoint of former Chairman Edwin G. Nourse when Nourse quit in sharp disagreement with the two other council members. But they were behind Nourse in his conviction that the council should be a professional body with a professional approach.

This difference came out sharply in the preparation of the council's economic report to Congress. (Not to be confused with the report to the President on business and Government that is out this week.) Both acting Chairman Leon Keyserling and the second member, John D. Clark, see 1950 in the rosy glow of optimism.

THEY SEE high production levels and high employment with hardly a cloud to mar the bright sky. This is especially true of Clark who after becoming a vice president and director of Standard Oil of Indiana resigned to get a Ph.D. in economics at Johns Hopkins University.

In general, members of the council's staff are in agreement with the hopeful outlook for 1950. But they felt that the all-important report to Congress should say more than, in the refrain of the popular song, "It's a Big, Wide, Wonderful World." They were for introducing some caution, arguing through long sessions with the council that there are elements that may dim the optimistic perspective of the present.

One of them, obviously, is the spiral of wages, prices and profits which continues to soar. The American Federation of Labor has just announced that it will seek wage increases of at least 10 cents an hour, adding the now familiar argument that industry can grant such increases without raising prices. While union wages may keep pace with price rises, the danger is that the mass of nonunion workers will increasingly be priced out of the market. Some signs that this is taking place are already evident.

Final proofs of the report to Congress are still being worked over. Before it is released to the public, it may contain some of the caution urged by the experts.

THE IMMEDIATE future of the council depends on finding a suitable chairman to replace Nourse. Apparently the decision has now gone against Keyserling who was at one time considered.

Presidential Assistant John R. Steelman has sounded out several economists of top rank as to whether they would be willing to consider taking the post. One was Prof. Edward G. Mason, dean of the graduate school of public administration at Harvard. Mason, who has held various advisory posts in Washington, said afterward to a friend:

"I found myself making an extemporaneous speech on why I would not consider the position. It is the only time in my life I have felt satisfied with an extemporaneous speech."

Another prospect intimated that he would be interested only if there were one more resignation from the council. That is to say he felt that if he accepted the chairmanship, he would find himself in a minority of one, as Nourse was prior to his resignation.

As the economists who have worked with him clearly recognize, Keyserling has extraordinary intellectual force and capacity. But they object to his tendency to fall back on free-flowing rhetoric instead of sticking to hard facts and a careful interpretation of their meaning.

In this political year the reaction to the newest report to Congress is likely to be tinged with politics, especially as Nourse has become something of a hero with conservatives since his resignation. He has spoken repeatedly to business groups in various parts of the country. But far more is at stake than the future of any one individual. The whole concept of the council—a body of expert appraisers—may be lost sight of, and that will be a serious loss to Government.

Workers On Sick Leave

In your December 23 issue I read "Bus companies said a surprising number of Washingtonians, many of them Government workers utilizing unexpired sick leave, left the city yesterday."

I am very much surprised to read such an item in your paper, for which I have always had the highest respect. I should like you to explain how the bus companies know that their passengers are Government employes utilizing unexpired sick leave.

Matter Of Fact

State Of The Union

PRESIDENT Harry S. Truman's sound money instincts have now apparently overbalanced the advice of his own lieutenants. Most of his advisers have shown little enthusiasm for such a move. Yet Truman can now be expected, barring a last-minute change of mind, to ask for considerable tax increases in his forthcoming message to Congress.

The decision to do so is a purely personal one on the part of the President, and it casts an interesting reflection on his mental processes. The fact is, according to those who have worked closely with him, that Truman has a quite genuine horror of "living beyond one's income." He is as worried by the prospect of continued Federal deficits as Senator Harry S. Bryd or the other congressional conservatives. But he blames the conservatives, and with some reason, for the present plight of the Federal budget.

A special favorite in Truman's long list of favorite complaints is that there would be hardly any deficit this year if the Republican Eightieth Congress had not passed the "rich man's tax bill" over his veto. A demand for higher taxes will thus both present the President with an opportunity to air this favorite complaint as publicly as possible, and will at the same time soothe his deficit-troubled conscience.

TRUMAN'S present intention is to concentrate his tax demand on corporation profits. Business profits after taxes have risen from a record 12 billion dollars in 1946 to over 20 billion dollars. Truman can thus argue, and has argued, that this hardly proves that business is being strangled by high taxes. Thus, although some of his advisers oppose the tax demand on the grounds of its affect on the domestic economy, Truman is not likely to be dissuaded on these grounds.

The official Administration line is that a final decision on taxes will only be taken after the full Cabinet has been formally consulted. In fact, consultation with the Cabinet has become more or less a farce ever since Truman went ahead with his 1948 Fair Deal message over the violent opposition of virtually his entire Cabinet. If Truman changes his mind in the end (which is certainly still possible) it will only be because his foreign policy advisers have persuaded him that the net effect of a demand for higher taxes will be to crack once and for all the toppling structure of the Administration's foreign policy.

As things stand, there is not the slightest chance that Congress will act on a demand for higher taxes. But by simply asking for higher taxes, Truman will give the resurgent isolationists of the Wherry-Bricker stripe a supreme opportunity. At the same time he will place Senator Arthur Vandenberg and those who follow him in an impossible position. As one of Vandenberg's admirers put it, the Republicans (and the conservative Democrats as well) will be asked to choose between "dollars for foreigners or higher taxes for American business." It is not hard to predict the outcome of such a choice.

MOREOVER, the choice will come at the worst possible moment. Senator Kenneth Wherry and others are for the first time frontally attacking Vandenberg and all he stands for. And Vandenberg himself is so ill that, if he follows the advice of all his friends, he will leave on a long vacation a few days after the session opens. All this adds up to an obvious conclusion. There is already every likelihood that the liver and lights will be cut out of American foreign policy at this session. And a Truman request for additional taxes will transform this likelihood into a virtual certainty.

Yet the request is nevertheless likely to be made, if only because it fits so neatly into the now well-established Administration technique of asking for action which everyone knows beforehand Congress will refuse to take. Aside from taxes, the President's message will reflect this technique throughout. Special emphasis will be given to three proposals which have no chance of passing Congress this session — Taft-Hartley repeal, the Brannan farm plan, and fair employment legislation. Taxes are now likely to make a fourth of these issues which are injected strictly for the political record.

There is just one way in which a proposal to increase taxes could be transformed from a strictly political issue which will be automatically shelved into a serious issue which would receive serious consideration in Congress. This would be for the President to say boldly and with all the emphasis at his command that a cold war cannot be fought painlessly any more than a hot war; and that if Soviet power continues to increase while the power of the Western world declines disaster can be the only ultimate result.

Yet while Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson and other Administration spokesmen continue to pour out soothing syrup about "economy," there is very little likelihood that President Truman will take any such bold stand. Instead, all the signs are that the fog of politics-as-usual and business-as-usual will settle more heavily than ever over the Administration and the Congress, while the balance of power shifts slowly and inexorably in favor of the Soviet Union. This is something which should be borne in mind by those interested in the real State of the Union in the year 1950.

Texas Slaps at Church Council In School Segregation Case

The Attorney General of Texas yesterday slapped at the Federal Council of Churches of Christ for attempting to intervene in a school segregation case now before the Supreme Court.

The council had asked consent of Attorney General Price Daniel to the filing of a "friend of the court" brief. Daniel retorted he would agree only if there was added to the brief "a disclosure of the fact that the religious denominations represented by the Federal Council maintain separate churches, separate church schools, separate denominational colleges and separate congregations for white and Negro citizens in Texas and 14 other Southern States."

Then Daniel added: "On the point you seek to cover as to 'necessity and desirability' of separate facilities in this State, your practice is equally as important as your preachment."

Daniel added that the three largest Texas denominations, the Episcopal, Methodist and Presbyterian churches, had not joined in the council's brief asking for an end to "separate but equal" schools for the two races. Daniel also expressed doubt that the council, whose headquarters are in New York, spoke the "true sentiment" of its Southern congregations. Catholics and Southern Baptists do not belong to the council, he also pointed out.

The case in question is that of Heman Marion Sweatt, who seeks to enter the University of Texas Law School. It is one of three cases to be argued, probably in February, before the Supreme Court in which the "separate but equal" doctrine is under attack.

Daniel said segregation was practiced in Texas not because of "a contention of racial superiority or inferiority" but "solely upon the right of a State or a church to offer the same education or worship in separate schools or separate churches if the segregated system would better preserve the peace, welfare, opportunities and happiness of a majority of races."

Lustron to Ask New U. S. Loan On Jan. 4 in Financial Crisis

Columbus, Ohio, Dec. 29 (AP).—Lustron Corp.—a prefabricated housing manufacturer already in debt to the Government about $37,500,000—will seek a new loan January 4.

The request, said President Carl G. Strandlund, will be sought on the basis of a stepped-up production program and a reorganization plan designed to pull the giant corporation out of the red.

Strandlund said the new program would begin March 1.

"It is logical to be hopeful such a loan will be forthcoming on the basis of the situation," observed Strandlund.

This announcement came today simultaneously with a statement by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation that it will have to act "very soon" unless Lustron gets its financial house in order.

Harvey J. Gunderson, RFC director, said in Washington that the company "is in default on its loans, and we can't wait much longer."

An RFC spokesman said the agency's legal department has called on Lustron to submit by January 6 some plan for "getting the company on its feet."

Strandlund said the report on which a request for more Government money is based will be the answer to the legal department's request.

The Lustron president denied the company is in default on its debt.

Strandlund said 20 million dollars of the total debt was loaned by RFC on short terms, some as low as 60 days.

"We could hardly spend the loan in that time, much less pay it back," Strandlund commented.

He said RFC had not asked him for the money, which came due December 1.

Gunderson also said Lustron appeared more interested in Government assistance than in getting help from private capital.

Clapp Submits Report On Middle East Survey

Gordon Clapp made a final report to President Truman yesterday on his United Nations economic-survey mission to the Middle East.

He said he is returning to Knoxville, Tenn., Saturday to resume his duties as chairman of the Tennessee Valley Authority.

Clapp said he told the President of the survey made by the Middle East Mission, of which he was chairman, and of U. N. approval of a 54-million-dollar work-relief program for approximately 750,000 Arab refugees from Palestine.

World Bank Calls 10-Year Bank Issue In Refunding Move

The World Bank called yesterday for redemption February 17 of an issue of one hundred million dollars in ten-year, 2¾ percent bonds which otherwise would not be due until July 15, 1957.

The bonds are to be paid off at 101 (that is, $10,100 will be paid for a $10,000 par value bond) plus accrued interest to February 17. Payment will be made at the New York Federal Reserve Bank.

Eugene R. Black, president, has announced the bank intends to ask early next year for bids on a refunding issue of one hundred million dollars in serial bonds which will mature at the rate of ten million dollars a year from 1953 through 1962.

He said the refunding transaction is aimed at getting a new test of the bank's credit standing and at adjusting the maturities of bank securities to fit in with loan repayments it expects to receive in the 1953-62 period.

Officials also expect the refunding issue will tend to reduce interest charges by bringing comparatively high bids.

Chain Letter Asks Donations to Aid Taft's Campaign

St. Joseph, Mo., Dec. 29 (AP).—Chain letters asking recipients to send a dollar or more to assist the campaign of Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio made their appearance here today.

The letters, some of them mailed from New York, asked that those receiving the letters send copies to 10 friends. They asked that the contribution be sent to Ben E. Tate, treasurer of the Taft campaign fund, 3204 Carew Tower, Cincinatti, Ohio.

Taft, a Republican, is seeking reelection in 1950.

"Taft has been singled out for slaughter," the letter said in part. "Many millions of dollars are being accumulated to destroy him politically. If these forces are successful it will have a most serious effect on the other members of Congress who are inclined to vote courageously. . . ."

In Cincinnati, Senator Taft told a newsman:

"We have tried to discourage the circulation of these chain letters. We had nothing to do with starting them and are not encouraging their continuance."

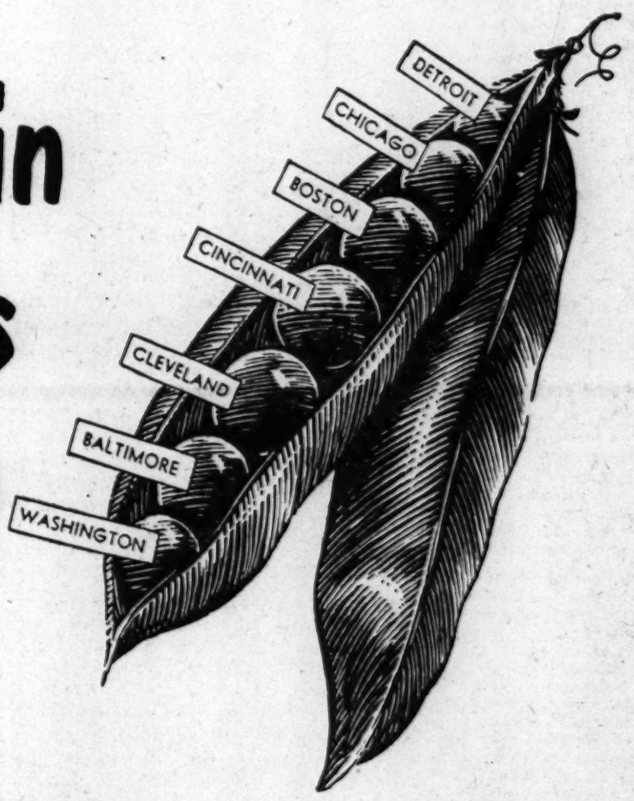
Transit Fares in OTHER Cities LIKE PEAS IN A POD



Metropolitan transit systems all over the United States have been forced to ask for fare adjustments to meet skyrocketing costs, mostly caused by wage increases.

Capital Transit is no exception.

A recent labor Arbitration Award, over which we had no control, added more than $1 million to a payroll that already totaled over $16 million annually. On top of this, back pay to July 1, 1949, and other costs were added.

Transit companies in cities the size of ours have had to overcome the same problem your transit company is trying to solve:

HOW TO RENDER GOOD SERVICE, PAY GOOD WAGES, OBTAIN A REASONABLE RETURN ON INVESTMENT AND LAY A LITTLE ASIDE FOR EMERGENCIES.

The fare in Chicago is now 15c on surface lines, 17c on rapid transit; in Boston 60 percent of the riders pay 15c, some 20c; Cincinnati 13c; Cleveland 13c, 2 tokens 25c, $1.80 pass; Baltimore 13c, 2 tokens 25c; Detroit 13c, 4 tokens 50c . . . and so it goes. And in some of these cities transit lines are municipally operated . . . little or no taxes are paid . . . . . . and deficits are made up from municipal or state treasuries.

Capital Transit, on the other hand, will pay more than $2 million in taxes for 1949; has no unlimited or hidden sources of income.

WHAT WOULD YOU DO?

If you were faced with the same higher operating cost problem as Capital Transit and other transit companies, you, too, would ask for an adjustment in fares. You would be forced to take the same important step we must take to fulfill our obligations to provide you with good service and still remain financially sound.

C. & P. Board Votes Outlay Of $2,301,000

By S. Oliver Goodman

Directors of Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. yesterday authorized additional expenditures of $2,301,000 for the improvement and expansion of telephone facilities here.

This brings the total approved during 1949 to more than 13 million dollars, a company spokesman said.

Of the latest outlay, $1,727,000 will be spent for many relatively small projects involving the construction, replacements and removal of telephone plant during the first quarter of 1950.

The company will spend $350,000 for the installation of additional dial equipment in the Woodley and Congress Heights centers. Also, more than $126,000 will be spent for installation of underground cable to provide additional facilities in several sections of the Woodley central office area.

Among the major projects of C. & P. during the past year have been a nine-story addition to the company's headquarters building at 725 13th st. nw. and the start of installation of long distance dial switching equipment. In the Brookland section, construction of a $1,025,000 central office building was completed. The new office, which houses more than a million dollars worth of dial equipment, will serve initially about 3800 main telephones.

During the past year, about 17,000 telephones were added, bringing total now in service to an all-time high of about 465,000.

IMPROVEMENT: Pennsylvania Railroad yesterday reported November net income of $2,050,328, a drop of $1,620,959 as compared with the same 1948 month. For the first 11 months, a deficit of $2,231,886 was reported, against net income of $32,922,843 in the like period last year. President Walter S. Franklin on Wednesday said that "based on a clear indication of December earnings" the road would end this year with net income of about 19 million dollars.

ODD LOTS: The Hecht Co., in addition to declaring the regular quarterly dividend on common stock, also voted the usual 93¾-cent preferred dividend, payable January 31 to stock of record January 9 . . . H. Lawrence Choate on Saturday will complete his twenty-fifth year as Washington general agent of the Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Co. of Newark . . . Automotive News yesterday estimated that 1949 auto output will reach 8,250,471 vehicles, as compared with the previous record of 5,358,420 set in 1929 . . . Hallierafters, Inc., yesterday introduced a table model television set with 16-inch rectangular viewing tube to retail for $279.95 . . . Thomas A. Rota of House & Hermann reported a "heavy demand for home furnishings" as he prepared to attend the semiannual home furnishings markets which open January 9 in Chicago and Grand Rapids.

STORE SALES: In the first 11 months this year Washington department store sales edged 1 percent higher than in the same 1948 period, according to the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond. Local sales in November were reported 3 percent better than in the same month last year. Trend of December sales indicates that this year's store sales will have set an all-time record. The Fifth Reserve District as a whole averaged 4 percent lower in November sales and 8 percent down for the 11-month period.

WHO'S WHO TODAY: John K. Gustafson, for the past two years associated with the Atomic Energy Commission here, has joined the M. A. Hanna Co. as consulting geologist, effective January 1 . . . J. J. Leu has been elected vice president in charge of services and operation of American Oil Co. and Marc I. Schwartz as vice president in charge of sales . . . Holcombe Parkes will resign as vice president in charge of public relations for the National Association of Manufacturers to become executive vice president of Apex Film Corp., effective February 6 . . . Herbert Lee is the new advertising manager of Lee Rubber & Tire Corp. . . . Donald N. Givler has been elected executive vice president of Grocery Store Products Co. .

POPULAR: Secretary Snyder announced holders of a big issue of Treasury certificates of indebtedness maturing January 1 have subscribed heavily to an exchange offering bearing a lower rate of interest. The maturing issue totals $5,694,596,000 and subscriptions to the new issue amounted to $5,371,726,000, he said. Thus, cash redemptions were only $322,870,000 or less than 6 percent of the amount falling due, although the new issue pays one eighth of 1 percent less interest.

EARNINGS: Willys - Overland Motors, Inc., reported net income of $3,423,710 or $1.04 a common share in the fiscal year ended September 30, against $7,077,400 or $2.39 in previous year. Total sales for 1949 were $142,362,944 against $173,346,360 for previous year. Other earnings reports:

Hope Tops Crosby At the Boxoffice

By Richard L. Coe

HERE ARE THE "Money-Making Stars of 1949," toppers in the eighteenth annual Motion Picture Herald Poll of theater exhibitors.

Bob Hope, who had two record-breakers during the year, "The Paleface" and "Sorrowful Jones," cops first place away from Bing Crosby, who'd made MPH Poll history by holding onto the top spot five consecutive years.

Bing is second in his tenth appearance in the list. His pictures this year were "A Connecticut Yankee" and "Top o' the Morning."

Abbott and Costello, who won first place in '42, are third this year, as they were in '48, a notable coup because this year they made only half as many films as in the previous one.

John Wayne skyrocketed to fourth position. He'd never been in the top 10 before, though he did rank sixteenth last year. His new pictures were "Wake of the Red Witch," "Three Godfathers," "She Wore a Yellow Ribbon" and "The Fighting Kentuckian." "Red River" came out late in '48, so was another lure, as was a packet of reissues capitalizing on his current vogue and sometimes putting him in the position of opposing himself at as many as five box offices in one town.

Gary Cooper's in fifth place for his eleventh appearance in the golden set. Last year he was fourth; his new films during the year were "The Fountainhead" and "Task Force."

Cary Grant, who makes only one picture a year, is sixth, with reissues and "I Was a Male War Bride" boosting his stock. The new bridegroom was eighth in '48 and ninth in '44.

Betty Grable, only glamour girl to head the list ('43), is in seventh place. Her "When My Baby Smiles at Me" did the trick, for people stayed away from the box offices of "The Beautiful Blonde from Bashful Bend."

Esther Williams, in eighth place, is in the top 10 for the first time, with "Take Me Out to the Ball-Game" and "Neptune's Daughter," her efforts of the year. Esther was eleventh last year and her previous musicals are still going the rounds.

Humphrey Bogart is ninth, his seventh listing in the 10. "Knock on Any Door" and "Tokyo Joe" were his '49 releases, though "Key Largo" still had enough playing time to help the big push.

That other Yuletime bridegroom, Clark Gable, is the tenth, more of a coup than you might think, for he's the only star of the 1932 poll still in the fast running. His pictures this year were "Any Number Can Play" and "Command Decision."

Two matters are outstanding, so far as these personalities are concerned.

There are only two girls in the list. And of the men, only one is under 45—and he, John Wayne, is 42. Both girls are nearer 30 than 25, one over, one under.

Evidently the ladies decide the stars they want and they usually pick on a fellow their husbands will like, too.

And so far as those "boys" are concerned, what's all this hubbub about Ezio Pinza and his 50-odd years? Ezio isn't the only old saw in the woodpile and if you're pushing 40, boys, don't worry. Your best years seem to lie ahead.

The next 15 box office certainties, in order of the exhibitors' poll, are:

James Stewart, Randolph Scott, Red Skelton, Clifton Webb, Loretta Young, June Allyson, Alan Ladd, Roy Rogers, Dan Dailey, Olivia de Havilland, Robert Mitchum, Claudette Colbert, Gregory Peck, Spencer Tracy and Jane Wyman.

Charlie Keller Signed by Detroit

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

CASEY STENGEL qualified as Manager of the Year for getting the Yankees home in front with liberal applications of patience, bailing wire, and sheer inspirational genius in shuffling his lineup day to day. He never had to contend with Dick Wakefield, who was exclusively the problem of Manager Red Rolfe of the Tigers.

POVICH

But Wakefield has now moved right into Stengel's life, as it happens. The Yankees fetched him from the Tigers in a swap for First Baseman Dick Kryhoski. They're gambling that under the ministrations of Stengel they can bring some kind of order to Wakefield's attitude toward baseball which finally drove the Detroit club to tossing in the towel.

It's probably Casey's greatest challenge. Wakefield has alternately played like the finest young outfielder in baseball, and the most hopeless. Rolfe finally had to bench him last year before indignant and booing Detroit fans broke Wakefield's heart with their cat-calls. Their boos finally were beginning to penetrate the thick hide of Laughing Boy, who hadn't seemed to care to that point.

Stengel's tactics with Wakefield are as yet unknown. Doubtless he'll try to think up something new. Steve O'Neil's generous patience with Wakefield didn't work, nor did Rolfe's attempts to needle the fellow into his best efforts.

FOLLOWING his trade to the Yankes last week, Wakefield issued an extraordinary three-page statement to the press, severe in its self-criticism, and with a strange humility of tone. He admitted that he had let the Detroit club and its fans down, and was now realizing his duty to the game. He'd give his best, he said, to prove to the Yankees that he was a good ball player.

But for years Wakefield has been known as the spoiled ball player. He came into the majors figuratively with a silver spoon in his mouth. The Tigers wrote him a $52,000 bonus check for signing a contract, and accompanied it with a custom-built auto from one of Walter O. Briggs' factories, despite the fact that Wakefield's only baseball background was with the University of Michigan varsity.

There was no suspicion in that year of 1941, that Wakefield was being over-paid. A dozen big league scouts were smitten with the classic smoothness of his swing. And for a big man he was fast, and he could throw. The fact that facially and physically he resembled Ted Williams stimulated the bidding. Even Clark Griffith wired Wakefield a $50,000 offer.

WAKEFIELD was a rakish figure in the Florida camp of the Tigers, with that new car and all that money in the bank. He didn't come North with all of his fiscal assets, however. Buck Newsom and Roy Cullenbine took him pretty good at the pool table in the Tigers' hotel, and when they discovered that he would bet on most anything, they wangled him into pitching horseshoes, too.

Golden Boy, however, did pretty well for the Tigers in 1943-44 after a year of seasoning at their Beaumont farm. He moved up to the parent club along with Manager Steve O'Neil, who had him at Beaumont, and was wise to most of the player's failings. With the Tigers he pounded out a batting average of .316 in '43 and before he left to join the Navy the next year he was a good-looking .355 hitter.

O'Neil was indulging him, though. He was never amazed at Wakefield's erratic performances, either in the outfield or on the bases. At Beaumont, O'Neil was coaching at first base while managing, and indignant when Wakefield was caught napping and was picked off first base by a pitcher he had been warned about as having "a tricky move to first." Wakefield was slow in learning the proper respect for the guy.

"THE NEXT time up, Wakefield drew a walk," O'Neil related, "and down at first base I was warning him again not to take too big a lead. He wanted to argue with me that he hadn't been too far off. He said, 'I was standing right here the last time,' and pointed to his tracks. While he was pointing, the pitcher picked him off again."

In the Tigers' camp last year, New Manager Red Rolfe tried a new technique to arouse Wakefield into giving his best. He assigned Coach Dick Bartell the job of setting a fire under the player, even if he had to insult him. Bartell called him all the names in the book, but Wakefield's response was mild. The only time he appeared annoyed, he cupped his hands at Bartell and yelled, "Aw, keep quiet, or I'll have to buy up your contract and retire you from baseball."

The Yankees are getting him after a season in which Wakefield was a .206 hitter. The Yankee uniform is supposed to work magic on players who flopped with other clubs. Its spell never was confronted with a stiffer test, and for Manager Stengel it's his greatest challenge.

Penn State, Wolfpack Advance to Dixie Finals

Raleigh, N. C., Dec. 29 (AP).—Penn State, the surprise of the Dixie Basketball Classic, tonight gained a place in the championship finals with North Carolina State by upsetting West Virginia, 46-41.

Penn State, held to a 17-all halftime count by the favored West Virginians, was led by Forward Joe Tocci, at 5 feet 7 and weighing only 150 pounds, the smallest player in the tournament. He contributed nine vital points and some valuable floor play.

North Carolina State won its berth in the championship final earlier by whipping Georgia Tech, 57-34.

North Carolina moved ahead by upsetting Duke, 59-52, in the opener of tonight's twin bill. Rhode Island State had turned back Wake Forest, 61-57, in the afternoon opener.

Maryland Brushes Up On 136 Plays

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Ponte Vedra Beach, Fla., Dec. 29.—Maryland, one of the Nation's defensive giants, will try to outoffense Missouri one of the Nation's offensive giants, in Monday's Gator Bowl game.

That became evident today, as the Terps went through the last of their two-day practices in preparation for the New Year clash.

For the third straight day the emphasis was on offense in the Terrapin camp here. The coaching staff has revamped th entire attack adding no less than 136 plays.

Actually theres not a new play in the 136, but merely four variations of each of the 34 plays in the Maryland repertoire.

"Since Missouri uses the split-T also we are certain they will use one of five defenses to try and stop us," Coach Jim Tatum told his 44-man squad. "We are aligning our offense to meet whatever defense they throw at us."

From his experience with the split-T, which he learned from Missouri's Coach Don Faurot, Tatum believes the Tigers will employ either a seven or eight-man line, a seven box, a five-man line,

New Yorkers Win in Garden

New York, Dec. 29 (AP).—Sherman White, Long Island University's center, whipped in 31 points to lead the Blackbirds to a 73-66 victory over Western Kentucky in the feature of a college basketball double-header tonight at Madison Square Garden. A crowd of 18,000 saw New York University defeat Yale, 76-62, in the opener.

Jimmy Kitts Explains

Georgetown Chosen for Bowl Because of Good Background

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

El Paso, Tex., Dec. 29.—A one-time foe of Georgetown had a lot to do with its surprise selection in Monday's Sun Bowl here.

Jimmy Kitts, who coached VPI to a 3-0 victory over the Hoyas in 1941, revealed today some of the reasons the Hoyas were picked to face El Paso's Texas Western.

Kitts, who took Rice to two Southwest Conference titles, is out of athletics now. He manages Texas Western's student union building and is a member of the three-man selection committee for the Southwestern Sun Carnival Association.

According to Kitts, Georgetown's 12-6 upset of Wake Forest helped its cause no little.

Said Jimmy, "Southern Methodist had all it could do to beat Wake Forest, 6-0. When Georgetown won its Wake Forest game, people down here became interested in the team."

Kitts added, "We don't have big money to offer in our little bowl here. All we can hope for is a school with a good background that plays a representative schedule. We don't worry about them

Caps Reject Tri-City Offer For Nichols

The Caps have rejected an offer by Ben Kerner, owner of the Tri-City Blackhawks, for Jack Nichols, 23-year-old sophomore center of the local pros.

General Manager Bob Foster made the announcement last night as the Caps looked ahead to tomorrow night's National Basketball Association game with the New York Knickerbockers.

Tri-City offered Don Otten, 7-foot center; Jim Owens, speedy and fast breaking forward, and $5000 in exchange for Nichols.

Owner Uline, vacationing in Florida, said that "we have had numerous offers for Nichols, but have seen fit to consider none of them. He's one of the great stars of pro backetball today, and we are well aware of it!"

Nichols scored 27 points as the Caps upset the Syracuse Nationals here last Wednesday night, 87-85, and has registered a total of 392 points in 27 starts, or average of 14.5 per game.

Old Yankee In Shape for Utility Role With Rolfe

Detroit, Dec. 29 (AP).—Outfielder Charlie "King Kong" Keller, who had become almost a fixture in the New York Yankees baseball picture, was signed today by the Detroit Tigers.

Keller's entire baseball career up to now had been spent in either a uniform of the Yankees or their Newark, N. J., farm club of the International League.

"King Kong's" slugging ability won him recognition as one of the top distance hitters in the American League, but he had been below par physically since he underwent a back operation in 1947.

Keller told Detroit officials that he now is in "excellent condition."

He played in only 61 games for the Yankees last season. This winter he was offered a job managing one of the Yankee farm clubs.

The 33-year-old Keller turned that offer down, saying he still felt he had "quite a bit of good baseball left."

Yankees Will Miss Him

The Yankees then reluctantly granted him his unconditional release and Keller dickered with a couple of ball clubs before signing with the Detroit Tigers.

Keller said today he was "glad to get the chance to play," although he added it "will feel funny to play against the Yankees."

Arthur "Red" Patterson, secretary of the Yankees, said that club was "happy that Keller has been able to sign a contract with another major league club.

Patterson added, "We're happy because it means that Charlie apparently has recovered from his back operation three years ago, otherwise he would not have considered playing again.

"We wish him the best of luck, except on occasions when the Tigers and Yankees play each other."

Stengel Praises Him

The Yankee official appeared surprised that the former slugging outfielder had decided to return to active duty instead of settling for a managerial job.

Manager Casey Stengel of the Yankees was another of the Yankees organization who had only kind words to say about Keller.

In Baltimore early this month, Stengel told a Yankee organization party:

"The saddest duty I've had to perform since I joined the Yankees a year ago was agreeing to hand Keller his unconditional release. It was of his own choosing, however, not mine. Charlie felt he could not help the club any more.

"I want to say publicly that as long as I'm with the Yankees, Keller can have a job with the organization if he wants it. He is one of the finest persons I've ever known," Stengel concluded.

By joining the Tigers, Keller will be playing for his old teammate, Manager Red Rolfe.

Bullis Plays Tonight in Daytona Bowl

Special Dispatch to The Post

Daytona Beach, Fla., Dec. 29.—The Bulls Prep Little Admirals of Silver Spring, Md., make their second bowl game appearance in three years tomorrow night.

They face Castle Heights Military Academy of Lebanon, Tenn., here in the Shrine bowl game.

In 1947, after an unbeaten season, Bullis went to Lynn, Mass., and battled Marianapolis, (Conn.) Academy to a 6-6 tie in the Shoe bowl game.

Injuries Wrecked Bullis

The Little Admirals carry a decidedly inferior record into tomorrow night's game. They've won only two games, tied one and lost six.

They won their first two games, before a wave of injuries hit them. They are in their best physical condition since the season opened, and are considered a good match for the Tennessee club despite the latter's record of seven wins against one loss.

Bullis Coach Hary Deming will depend on Fullback Matias (Chow) Echaves to spearhead his team to victory. Echaves scored three touchdowns in the Bullis opener, but was out the rest of the year with a wrenched ankle. Echaves is a 190-pound speedster, who got his football start at Anacostia.

Baker Opponents' Threat

Rounding out the Bullis T formation backfield will be Quarterback Dick King, Joe Mook and Ed Cashman.

Ed Baker, 155-pound halfback is the Castle Heights youngster whom Bullis must stop. Baker passed for eight touchdowns and ran for six more. He shoots most of his passes at Tom Bobertson, a fleet, 150-pound end, who caught seven of them for touchdowns.

Castle Heights also boasts of the best center prospects in the South in 190-pounder Dick Inman. Backing up the line of defense, Dick snared seven enemy passes, and returned three of them for touchdowns.

Indian Great Praises Trippi

Thorpe Says Many Legends Exaggerated

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

THE GREAT JIM THORPE yesterday met a group of reporters who never saw him perform, and he was polite and patient with them.

He told them that many of the Thorpe legends have become exaggerated through the years. But, as though not to disappoint them, he admitted that he once offered to bet $1000 that he could make a first down against any team in four tries. Nobody took him up.

The scene of yesterday's gathering was the Touchdown Club. The Indian star of the 1907-12 Carlisle Institute football and track teams is in town to receive the T. D. Club's scroll and leather case January 7 as "America's greatest athlete of all time."

It's not the first such honor to be accorded him. Back in 1912 after the Olympic Games in Sweden, King Gustaf acclaimed Thorpe the "greatest athlete in the world."

THE BIG SAC and Fox Indian is looking fit and youthful for his 61-years. There's only the slightest hint of gray hair at his temples, and he walks straight as an arrow. He weighs 212 pounds, just 25 more than when the Swedish King honored him.

He doesn't have a job or a home now. "My wife and I live wherever we find a nail to hang our clothes," he says. His most recent home was Los Angeles where he worked as a bouncer in a bar.

HE WAS ALSO OCCUPIED for a time as technical director of the Warner Brothers motion picture, "The All-American," based on Thorpe's life.

Warners is negotiating with the A.A.U. for the return of the 1912 Olympic medals taken from Thorpe after he was accused of being a "professional."

"BUT THAT Avery Brundage, A.A.U. boss, is just a stuffed shirt," said Thorpe yesterday. "He acknowledges that I was the greatest American athlete, so he says why do I need the medals to prove it."

Thorpe surrendered the medals in 1913 after admitting he played semipro baseball at Rocky Mount, N. C., to help pay his tuition at Carlisle.

After he gets the Touchdown award, Jim will be off for Philadelphia where he's negotiating for a Nation-wide television program. He'd skip that offer though if he could just get a job coaching a pro football team.

A LOT OF TEAMS could still use Jim as a dropkicker. Last August before a San Francisco 49ers game, Jim gave an exhibition. Starting from the 10-yard line and moving back, he booted 16 out of 23 through the uprights. The last one traveled 55 yards.

JIM MADE a lot of comparisons between modern day and oldtime football, attacking the present-day substitution rule because "players don't get a chance to get warmed up before they're taken out. Players should stay in there until they're completely exhausted or injured."

His biggest concession to modern football, and it was a surprising concession, is that Charlie Trippi of the Chicago Cardinals, is the "greatest player I ever saw."

"Trippi is an excellent passer, runner and punter, who blocks well and is a sure tackler," said Thorpe.

LaMotta Flouts Edict to Fight Or Lose His Title

New York, Dec. 29 (AP).—Jake La Motta today was given until Februaary 1 to sign for a March defense of his middleweight title.

If he doesn't he will be stripped of his championship in New York State. Chairman Eddie Eagan of the New York State Athletic Commission said he set the deadline after Jake told a commission meeting he planned to defend in June and not before.

La Motta, recently beaten by Frenchman Robert Villemain in a nontitle bout, asked more time to properly condition himself.

"I can't fight for the title until June," said Jake, "if they take the title away, I won't take it lying down. I'll fight it."

Deer Hunters Kill 949 in Maryland

By Ralph Murdock

THE DEER HUNTERS' bag total in Maryland was 949 bucks during the December 5 to December 10, 1949, open season in the six counties of Garrett, Worcester, Frederick, Cecil, Allegany and Washington. (The score sheet showed that 18 fewer legal bucks were killed than in the same counties in 1948. Again, Garrett County was the top hunting spot with 493. The average weight per deer was 119 pounds.

MURDOCK

Wardens Leo G. Friend and Lloyd W. Cook of the Maryland Game and Inland Fish Commission reports that a four-point doe was killed near Friendsville, in the White Rock Mountain section of Garrett County.

A raccoon recently caught by Donald Knight of Reisterstown, was found to have traveled at least 15 miles (as the crow flies) from the point of liberation. A tag in the ear of the coon revealed that he had been released at the Patuxent Wildlife Research Center near Bowie, Md.

MR. LEONARD LLEWELLYN, biologist at the Center, said the coon had been tagged the latter part of September, 1949, and at the same time weighed 13 pounds and was probably 3 years old. When captured on December 9, he had gained 2½ pounds in spite of his long trip, which is rather unusual since raccoons rarely travel over 2 or 3 miles.

Col. and Mrs. G. N. Church of Falls Church, Va., and their son, Maj. M. E. Church, stationed in Rome, Ga., are spending their Christmas vacation hunting and fishing at Homosassa, Fla. They are staying at the Homosassa Spring Hotel and have had wonderful luck duck shooting, bagging the limit every day.

Their bass fishing has also been excellent. Colonel Church will be joined by General Hines of the Veterans' Administration, during the latter part of the Florida duck season, which ends January 7.

A NEW METHOD of night-time fox and coon hunting has been developed around Homosassa Springs—from jeeps and trucks with large packs of hounds—and it is not unusual for night hunters to bring in 8 to 10 coons with a couple of foxes thrown in for good measure.

Incidentally, the largest bass caught in Florida during the current season was a 13-pound 2-inch champ, taken off the hotel dock by Mrs. R. L. Rundquist. The little lady is only 4 feet 11 inches tall. She expects to be the prize winner of most all of the fishing contests for 1949 by this remarkable catch.

Ed Sudler, builder, and Dr. Harry W. Smith, dentist, ardent duck hunters who devoted each Friday to the sport, are bemoaning the fact that the shooting is over on the Chesapeake Bay. Dr. Smith says, "What hurts most is the fact that as soon as we were able to hit those golden-eyed whistlers, the curtain came down and ended the season."

Fishing, Hunting Club Televised

The first show in a new television series of the "Fishing and Hunting Club of the Air" will be presented over WTTG, channel five, tonight from 9 to 9:30 o'clock.

Tommy Henrich, star outfielder of the New York Yankees, will be the featured guest.

Middies Help Open Cotton Tournament

Unbeaten in their own backyards, Navy and Georgetown play on the road tonight in search of more honors.

Navy plays Southern Methodist in the first round of the inaugural Cotton Bowl Tournament at Dallas. Georgetown is in Atlantic City to meet once-beaten LaSalle of Philadelphia.

Also on tonight's Cotton Bowl bill is a game between unbeaten St. Louis U. and Baylor. If the Middies win tonight, they play the St. Louis-Baylor winner in the finals Saturday night.

Tars Win Four

The Middies swamped Penn Military, Harvard, Virginia and Maryland, averaging 67 points per game. A crowd of 3000 is expected with Joe Fitzpatrick, Pat Corrigan, Bill Wilson, Dave Mullaney and Swede Stinson starting for Navy.

SMU goes into the Navy game with a record of only two victories in nine starts. Jack Brown, Fred Freeman, Paul Mitchell, Tom Holm and George Owen will start for the Mustangs.

Georgetown has swept aside Catholic, American, New York A. C., Penn State and Harvard. LaSalle was unbeaten until UCLA beat it last week.

Herreris' Only Goal Wins for Frisco, 46-44

Philadelphia, Dec. 29. (AP).—A field goal by Rene Herrieris, his only two points of the game, gave San Francisco University the margin of victory over La Salle—46 to 44—in the second game of tonight's Convention Hall basketball double header before 5869 fans. Santa Clara routed Temple, 66-41, in the first game.

'Harvard Needs Dictator'

Haughton Was Brickley's Man

By Red Smith

NEW YORK, Dec. 29 (NYHT).—According to the lacy literature of the period, Charles Brickley in 1913 was "a short chunky youngster of twenty-one summers with curly black hair and always a smile upon his boyish face." In 1949, Brickley of Harvard was chunky and pink with lively blue eyes behind shell-rimmed glasses.

Charles Brickley

He was sitting at lunch with his son Chick and, among others, their new friend Ed Millstein. They had met Mr. Millstein recently under circumstances that would have endeared him to such rugged playmates of Charley Brickley's youth as Tack Hardwick and Eddie Mahan.

Seeing the Brickleys sorely outnumbered in a restaurant scuffle, Mr. Millstein, a Boys' High boy from Brooklyn, rose to the occasion with punctilio worthy of Harvard's loftiest traditions.

"Millstein is the name," he said courteously. "Is this a private fight or public? If it's public, I'm in." Bop!

At the time he didn't know he was defending one of the legendary figures of football's golden age. When he read about the incident in the papers next day, he volunteered his aid toward establishing that the Brickleys had been more set upon than setting. (Yesterday, a few hours before his death, all charges resulting from the affair were dropped.)

The luncheon conversation, though, was about football, not fisticuffs.

"THEY TALK ABOUT Harvard's glorious past," Brickley said, "but Harvard football wasn't terrific before Percy Haughton's day as coach and it has gone down hill ever since he left. Under Haughton I never played in a losing game. But remember we never beat Yale on Soldier's Field until 1912 and never won two straight from Yale until '12 and '13.

"The point is, Haughton was an absolute dictator and that's what Harvard needs, but we've never had another. The closest approach was Dick Harlow, and even he didn't have an entirely free hand. If we had a man like Lou Little, nobody'd tell him what to do.

"Bill Bingham is my friend, but he says himself that he's been in trouble ever since he became athletic director in 1926. Well, let Bill stay, but let's have, temporarily at least, a czar of Harvard football to get the sport on a sound basis. I'm thinking of a man like Ben Ticknor or Chuck Peabody or Eddy Mahan.

Thirty-six years after his last full season, Charley Brickley's name still is synonomous with the lost art of drop-kicking. Actually, he said he would rather be remembered as a great runner and blocker, which he was.

As a sophomore, for instance, he scored ten touchdowns and kicked 13 field goals; in the Princeton game that year, besides making three field goals, he rushed the ball for 106 yards while the whole Princeton team made 118.

Yet when he was asked which game he remembered best, he grinned bashfully and said, "the one when I kicked five." That was against Yale in 1913 when his goals scored every Harvard point in the 15-to-5 victory.

Will Baxter Use Manners?

WHILE FORMAL DRESS has not been made mandatory for next Wednesday's wrestling show at Turner's Arena, it is assumed that ringside patrons will conduct themselves in a manner more dignified than usual.

The occasion will mark the appearance of Lord Carlton, Britain's answer to Georgeous George. His Lordship, allegedly from Oxford, England, has been imported at the insistence of Jim (WMAL-TV) Gibbons.

Lord Carlton's valet will serve tea in the ring just before the match. To assure his Lordship a pleasant evening, his opponent will be that gracious gentleman's gentleman, Laverne Baxter.

If you must throw things into the ring, fans, for this one match toss crumpets and not those vulgar peanut shells.

Bill Bennings . . .

DEAR FOLKS:

When I came through with seven winners at Charles Town recently somebody cracked, "No wonder, the guy's on his home grounds." Well, Tropical Park isn't my home grounds and I haven't been doing so badly. Check 'em yourself. The Benningites have had 13 winners tossed their way so far this week—Monday, 4; Tuesday, 2; Wednesday, 2; Thursday, 5. Those five winners included Grateful, at $24.90, and the second half of the $508.90 daily double, tops for the Florida season to date. May be I'm wasting a lot of luck I should save for Bowie. A friend of mine said, when asked if he played horses, "Are you nuts? Of course, I don't bet on horses. I make all my money betting on wrestling matches."—BILL.

or the looping four-four defense. "It is up to us then," he continued, "to alter our offense either by a stepped up or reduced count, or by a slight shift in blocking assignments to meet whatever defense they employ."

Although he is preparing his charges to operate against a five-man line, Tatum does not think the Tigers will use that defense.

"Boston University, anticipating a passing attack against us in the fourth quarter when we trailed 13-7, switched to a five-man line and we went 90 yards on the ground against them to push over the winning touchdown. I sent Missouri the Boston-Maryland pictures in exchange for the Missouri-Oklahoma pictures and I'm rather certain they won't make the same mistake Boston made."

And how does Tatum prepare to halt Missouri's split-T attack?

"That, my boy," he chuckled, "is what has me baffled. I don't think I'll use the same defense against Faurot that I used when I beat him at Oklahoma. We came up with a seven-box that day the only time during the season we used it and beat Don rather handily. I'm sure he's ready for that one this time.

"And if Boston University's five-man line didn't work against us, it stands to reason that our five-man line, which we have employed against T teams all year, won't work against the Missouri T. Actually I'm stumped about a defense.. We'll simply have to outoffense them."

Quarterback Joe Tucker has been operating the attack more and more each session, indicating he'll play most of the game, a departure from the season-long practice of alternating Tucker with the other senior quarterback, Stan Lavine.

Sophomore Halfbacks Bob Shemonski and Mighty Mo Modzelewski and Senior Fullback Earl Roth are the other three members of the backfield, which has been getting most of the attention and yardage in the drills.

Cohen Scores 15, Georgetown Boys Reach Finals

Center Frank Cohen scored 15 points to lead Georgetown Branch's 120-pound team to a 39-26 win over Police Boys' Club No. 10 in the semifinals of the Boy's Club of Washington Christmas basketball tournament yesterday at the club's gym.

In other semifinal games: Alexandria's 105-pounders nosed out Georgetown, 37-35; Merrick defeated Georgetown, 39-27, in a 90-pound game; Merrick downed Eastern, 40-5, in an 80-pound game; and Nye House won from Police Boys' Club No. 10, 30-25, in an 80-pound game.

Becker Tops JCC In Foul Shooting

Teddy Becker of the Camotops won the senior individual foul-shooting contest yesterday at the Jewish Community Center, making good on 13 of 15 free throws. His team also won the team shooting championship with 50 out of 75.

losing a few games as long as they show that they have a good game in 'em."

Chairman of the selection committee is Charles D. Belding. Dr. Bob Homan is the other member. To hear Belding tell it, "I've picked all these teams in the 15 years of the Sun Bowl."

Belding, typical Texan, echoed Kitts' sentiments about picking a team with a "fine background that played a representative schedule."

Belding said, "I've been on Georgetown's campus and know something about its fine background." Belding said he went through the accelerated World War I program at the U. S. Naval Academy and served in the Navy 5½ years.

An insurance and real estate man here, Belding has been living in El Paso since 1920.

Belding exploded, "Hell, we run our bowl for fun. All those people trying to make money out of bowls are spoiling things."

Coach Bob Margarita immediately assembled his cowboys and took them out for some more fun—a scrimmage in the mud. Georgetown boys haven't seen any sun since they hit El Paso. It rained hard here all morning.

Sen. Richeson Will Ask Ruling On Bill Forcing Football Game

Richmond, Va., Dec. 29 (AP).—Attorney General J. Lindsay Almond, jr., will be asked to rule on the constitutionality of a proposed bill to require State-supported colleges to schedule athletic games with each other, State Senator Frank S. Richeson said today.

If it is held by the Attorney General such an act would be unconstitutional or otherwise inappropriate or contrary to existing educational policy, Richeson said he would make his proposal in the form of a Senate joint resolution. He announced yesterday his intention to sponsor such a bill to force the University of Virginia and William and Mary College football teams to meet.

"The main purpose of the legislative plan is to determine the facts behind the failure of Virginia and William and Mary to play football with each other," he explained.

"If the facts in the case justify the present mysterious situation, I am sure the General Assembly will not want to apply any force. On the other hand if there is no good reason for it, they should play each other."

[Editor's Note: At the University of Virginia, it was said that a principal reason why Virginia and William and Mary are not meeting in football is that the schools have not been in agreement on eligibility standards and scholastic requirements.]

Richeson, a Richmond realtor and alumnis of Randolph-Macon College, said the reception given his proposal confirmed his belief "the situation is a mater of considerable public concern."

W. and L. Beta Downs Eastern For Hi-Y Title

Washington-Lee Beta defeated Eastern, 54-35, to win the Hi-Y Christmas basketball tournament yesterday at the Boys' YMCA gym.

Larry Palmer paced the winners with 16 points, although the losers' Bradley Hutt was the game's high scorer with 21 points.

D'Ambrosio Gets 25 More, 3-Game Total Now 72

Gene D'Ambrosio continued his scoring spree in the Junior CYO basketball tournament yesterday at St. John's High with 25 points, as St. Joseph's defeated Holy Comforter, 33-15, in a semifinal game.

In another semifinal contest, St. Teresa's downed St. Dominic's 40-21.

D'Ambrosio's 25 points upped his three-game total to 72 points, a tournament record.

Ballston Indians Beat Falls Church, 23-9

The Ballston Indians 12-and-under basketball team defeated Falls Church School, 23-9, in an Arlington County Recreation League game yesterday at Claude Swanson Junior High. Phil Peterson led the winners with 13 points.

All four Ballston Indians teams are undefeated in their individual clarses in league competition.

The Federal Diary
by Jerry Kluttz

District, 11 States Exceed Quotas of Apportionment Law

Only 11 States and the District have more than their quota of the Federal jobs here that are under the State apportionment law. They are, in order of excess:

The District, Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, Nebraska, South Dakota, Vermont, Pennsylvania, Kansas, Maine, North Carolina and Minnesota. The remaining 44 States, Territories and possessions are under quota.

For example, the District is entitled to 267 jobs. Its residents occupy 10,666 quota jobs. Maryland has a quota of 733. It has 3288 jobs. Virginians are in 3739 quota jobs. They are entitled to 1073.

American Samoa, Guam and the Virgin Islands are all batting zero under the quota system. As a group, they are entitled to 24 jobs.

With Civil Service rapidly converting back to a peacetime job system, the State quota law will prevent appointments of many local and nearby residents to clerical jobs. The quota law covers about a third of the Federal jobs here.

STORY: A famed pilot, commenting on the recent plane crashes at Washington National Airport, said he wouldn't be surprised to hear this report when he called up the Weather Bureau station there to get the latest flying conditions:

"Visibility: Clear . . . Ceiling Unlimited . . . Scattered Airliners Likely."

BOND BILL: This is slated to be the first piece of major employe legislation to be considered by Congress. A subcommittee headed by Rep. Karsten (D., Mo.) will meet next Wednesday on it.

During the recess, Karsten has had an independent study made on the measure. The survey shows that upwards of 500,000 Federal workers last year paid nearly $2 million in premiums to private bonding companies for surety bonds required by the Government. The losses, to date, are about $50,000, a most profitable operation. The Hoover Commission estimated losses at $200,000 a year.

Several bond bills are before Congress. One would have the Government set up its own employe bonding operations in the Treasury. All are aimed toward either reducing or abolishing employe bond premiums.

REVENUE: Albert B. Niess, assistant deputy commissioner of Internal Revenue's Employment Tax Unit, retires today after 44 years of Federal service. He began his Government service as a $2.88-a-day machinist at the Naval Gun Factory here. In addition to his other duties, Niess was chairman of a space-saving committee that has conserved thousands of square feet of office space in Revenue offices throughout the country.

Also retiring today at Revenue are: Franklin Tewell, Mrs. Emory L. Barlow, Charles T. Haines, Mrs. Myrtle R. Leary, James H. Lowe, and Mrs. Bertha R. Newman.

Clyde B. Aitchison, a member of the Interstate Commerce Commission, has been exempted by the President from compulsory retirement under the 70-year rule. . . . Assistant Treasury Secretary William McC. Martin, jr., will be chairman of the Government drive to raise money for the National Symphony Orchestra. . . . Arthur S. Flemming, a former Civil Service member and now president of Ohio Wesleyan University, has been appointed to represent this country on the International Civil Service Advisory Board. The board operates under the United Nations. . . . Eric H. Biddle, who made studies during the war on how the British were decentralizing their London government, has been made a civil defense planning consultant for the National Security Resources Board. . . . Government girls who wish to attend chaperoned New Year's parties at nearby military installations should call Columbia 0735.

The Comptroller General has ruled that postal employes can't be paid overtime for work last Monday. Those who worked will be given compensatory time off within 30 days. . . . Civil Service has exams open for laundry assistant, laundry operative, and fork-lift operator-checker to fill openings in Army establishments here and nearby. Salaries: From 80 cents to $1.40 an hour.

Nine D. C. Police Get Promotions Due to Vacancy

Five Permanent, Four Temporary; Bullock Moves Up To Inspector Post

Police Capt. Albert I. Bullock, commanding officer of the Thirteenth Police Precinct, yesterday was raised to the rank of inspector and four other policemen received temporary boosts in a series of promotions.

In addition, temporary promotions granted four policemen some time ago were made permanent.

The boosts stemmed from the vacancy created Monday by the death of Inspector Milton D. Smith, assistant superintendent of police in charge of the police uniform and property office.

Others newly promoted yesterday were Lieut. Robert D. Chenault, Thirteenth Police Precinct, raised to temporary captain; Sergt. Ernest A. Fuller, Fourth Precinct, raised to temporary lieutenant; Corp. Percy G. Dawson, Sixth Precinct, promoted to temporary sergeant, and Pvt. John B. Southard, Ninth Precinct, promoted to temporary corporal.

Permanent Captain

The temporary captaincy of Capt. William T. Murphy, commanding officer of the Fourteenth Police Precinct, was made permanent.

Others whose temporary grades were made permanent were Lieut. Wayland W. Whittemore, administrative headquarters; Sergt. Robert Sandberg, identification bureau, and Corp. Beryl E. Darr.

The promotions were approved yesterday by the District Commissioners to take effect January 1.

Specific assignments of the men are expected to be announced later this week by the police superintendent.

Despite his promotion to inspector, Bullock was not named an assistant superintendent, the title held by Smith. Indications were that no new assistant superintendent would be named for the next few months at least.

Police Superintendent Robert J. Barrett explained that the assistant superintendency was conferred on Smith as a merit award for outstanding service as inspector in the police uniform and property office.

To Force in 1921

Bullock, born February 11, 1897, was appointed to the Metropolitan Police force in 1921. He won a sergeantcy in 1929, became a lieutenant in 1933 and a captain in 1942. He is the recipient of nine commendations.

The new inspector figured in a police shakeup ordered by the then police chief, Maj. Harvey G. Callahan February, 1947, and was transferred from command of the Eleventh Precinct to command of the Eighth.

At that time Callahan gave as reason for the shifts, "dissatisfaction" among high ranking police officers.

However, only three days before Bullock's transfer was announced, an antigaming squad commanded by Inspector Oscar J. Letterman smashed a $10,000 race betting and numbers layout operating a block from the Eleventh Precinct police station.

In 1945, Bullock, then in command of the traffic division and Capt. William J. Cunningham, then in charge of the Eleventh Precinct, exchanged assignments "for the good of the service" as the then police chief, Edward J. Kelly phrased it.

In Seventh Precinct

Bullock headed the vice squad in the Seventh Precinct during prohibition and commanded the riot squad during the "bonus march" disorders of 1932.

In 1946 he was divorced by his wife, Viola. The Bullocks have a 22-year-old son.

Chenault joined the force in 1924 and received his promotion to lieutenant in 1940. He holds 20 commendations.

Fuller was appointed to the force in 1924 and was made a sergeant in 1942. He holds six commendations.

Dawson was appointed to the force in 1935 and was promoted to corporal in 1944. He has won five commendations.

Southard joined the force in 1942 and is the holder of two commendations.

Murphy was named temporary captain and put in charge of the Fourteenth Police Precinct in 1948. Department officials said he holds "innumerable" commendations. He first joined the force in 1924.

Whittemore was appointed to the force in 1921. He was made temporary lieutenant last June and holds seven commendations.

Sandberg was appointed to the force in 1935. He was raised to a temporary sergeantcy last April and has been commended nine times.

Darr joined the force in 1940. He gained the rank of temporary corporal last May and holds six commendations.

Businessmen Urged to Up Chest Gifts

With the final report luncheon due today, Washington businessmen yesterday were asked to review their Community Chest contributions in view of the "unusually high" level of Christmas business.

It is hoped the report at 12:20 p. m. in the Hotel Washington will make something of a dent in the $465,000 still needed to meet the goal of $3,991,719.

Although it's the final general report session, donations may still be sent in by mail, Chest officials reminded all citizens.

The $3,526,296 contributed so far has come from 344,996 donors.

The suggestion that businessmen may be in a particularly good position to help make up the shortage came from Maurice L. Nee, Washington furnitureman and co-chairman of Business I unit.

"Probably some businessmen made their Community Chest contributions in the autumn on the basis of their volume in the previous months," said Nee. "Wherever business improved substantially in November and December, it is hoped these owners and executives may wish to review their firm contributions—either to increase them or possibly restore reductions that were made in the light of incomplete information on the year's business as a whole."

General Chairman Frank J. Luchs urged solicitors who have not completed assignments to do so and bring or send their pledges and contributions to Chest headquarters at 1101 M st. nw.

June-Like Days May Be Over For District

Skies will still be clear, but Washington today is in for a 5-degree drop in temperature over yesterday's mild weather, the Weather Bureau said.

Observers blamed it all on a cold air mass from Canada which began flowing into the area yesterday afternoon. The Canadian mass edged out the Pacific flow that brought the District sunny skies and mild temperatures two days in a row.

The high yesterday was 53 degrees at 2.54 p. m. after a low of 33 at 6:30 a. m. Today's forecast calls for a high in the upper 40s—48 is the best bet—after overnight lows of 30 in the city and 24 in the suburbs.

For Saturday, the forecast calls for some cloudiness, but no change in temperature.

Despondent Guardian Slays D. C. Waitress, Then Himself

JoAnn Rossman and her guardian, Sheldon C. McKean

A 57-year-old Williamsport, Pa. candy store proprietor has slain his attractive 21-year-old Washington ward then shot himself and left a note asking that they be buried side by side.

The Washington girl, Miss Jo Ann W. Rossman, who lived here at 1726 19th st. nw., was found dead with a bullet through her left breast. Her body was found near that of her guardian, Sheldon C. McKean, in his Williamsport apartment Wednesday.

Lycoming County Coroner Dr. Clarence R. Martin said McKean left a note containing religious quotations which asked forgiveness for his act. The note intimated he had been considering the murder for some time. Dr. Martin said McKean's note stated he could not bear to be away from Miss Rossman.

Dr. Martin termed the deaths murder and suicide. "The motive was despondency on McKean's part. There will be no inquest."

Dr. Martin said McKean had complained of constriction in his legs, apparently caused by hardening of the arteries. Friends of the dead girl said he had wanted her to return to Williamsport to take care of him.

A series of notes found in the death room indicated that McKean had planned the murder as early as a week before Christmas, Detective Fred Seitler, who investigated the case, reported.

McKean wrote on December 18 of his intention to "do away with" Miss Rossman, the detective said. He placed a down payment on a .32 caliber Savage automatic on December 21, and finished paying for it on December 24, Seitler said.

On December 27, McKean returned to the gun shop to have the weapon repaired, and the following day shot her with it, the detective added.

Seitler said that Miss Rossman had told friends that she "couldn't live in this small town any longer" before originally setting off for Washington.

Miss Rossman returned to Williamsport last weekend to be with her guardian. She had asked for time off from her job as a waitress at the Village Inn, 1606 Rhode Island ave. ne., for the visit.

Herman Rothsold, one of the inn's proprietors, said Miss Rossman had offered to return to work on Monday. "But I told her that things probably would be dull, and to take the whole week off." Miss Rossman was to have returned to Washington today.

Rothsold said she had worked at the inn for four or five months, and described her as a "nice little girl." He said he believed McKean had shot her in a fit of jealousy.

Rothsold said that Miss Rossman had been "going steady" with a Washington man, and that McKean probably had resented her friend.

Miss Rossman shared an apartment here with Miss Betty Lehman, a waitress at the El Commodoro Restaurant, and was known here as "Joan" Rossman. Miss Lehman was too distraught to talk to reporters yesterday.

Her sister, Mrs. John Gelflaichter, of the 19th st. address, said the two girls had known each other for the past four years, and had come to Washington together about six months ago.

Miss Rossman worked for a time in a beauty parlor before she became a waitress at the Village Inn. Mrs. Gelflaichter said she had been a student at St. Joseph's Parochial School in Williamsport.

McKean had been the murdered girl's guardian since she was 13. He had lived with Miss Rossman's parents before their deaths.

Sellners Put $125 Deposit On New Home

The future of the Robert L. Sellner family, burned out of their Landover (Md.) home on Christmas Eve, assumed a brighter hue yesterday when they placed a $125 deposit on a new home in Colonial Park, only a few blocks from their former dwelling.

The money, which represents the cost of title research and land fees, was part of the nearly $500 collected by Bladensburg firemen, who have had the family of nine as their temporary "guests" since the fire left the Sellners homeless and destroyed virtually all of their possessions. To complete the transaction, an additional $750 will have to be paid as a down payment on the house, and firemen are still seeking contributions to the charity fund.

Dudley Taylor, president of the Fire Department, said members hope to raise enough money to pay the down payment, after which Sellner will take over the responsibility of meeting the monthly payments.

The family, burned out while the parents and two sons were in Washington shopping for Christmas, has been assured it can remain at the firehouse as long as is necessary to complete arrangements for purchase of the house. Meanwhile, contributions to the group have included almost enough equipment to furnish their new home completely.

New Pontoon Unit of D. C. Guard Okayed

A pontoon bridge company equipped with a bridge capable of speedily spanning either the Anacostia or the Potomac River has been authorized for the District Guard, it was announced yesterday.

Authorized strength of the new company—114th Engineer Pontoon Bridge Company—has been set at five officers, one warrant officer and 163 enlisted men. The order creating the outfit becomes effective January 1.

According to Guard officials the pontoon bridge with a capacity of 50 to 70 tons can be thrown together at the rate of 100 feet an hour under blackout conditions.

uniform percentage of strength at 1850 men and officers, an action taken earlier this month, will not affect formation of the bridge company, it was said.

Other units will be held to a uniform pencentage of strength and excess personnel after careful screening will be assigned to the bridge outfit.

Meantime, elimination of "deadwood" in various units has been ordered by Brig. Gen. William H. Abendroth, Guard commander.

The process will not only lower present rosters so that men can be recruited for the bridge company and additional military police companies, but will also permit unit commanders to get in some accountable property now held by men who are carried on the roster but who have failed to report for drills.

'March of Dimes' Committees Announced

The District's three Commissioners yesterday were named to head an impressive list of "March of Dimes" drive appointments.

John Russell Young, Guy Mason and Brig. Gen. Gordon R. Young will act as honorary chairman for the campaign running January 14-31, Edgar Morris, general chairman for the District, announced.

The local opening will precede the national campaign. Arrangements are being made to bring the "March of Dimes" poster girl, Wanda Wiley, 8-year-old victim of the 1948 polio epidemic, from Austin, Tex.

Morris, revealing plans for a number of projects in connection with the drive, said headquarters have been opened at 1350 Pennsylvania ave. nw., and announced appointment of Mrs. Wayne Parish as secretary in charge of the headquarters.

Robert V. Fleming was chosen as treasurer; John M. Christie as assistant treasurer; J. J. Krohr, comptroller and James C. Russell, secretary.

Other chairmen are: Special gifts committee, William J. McManus; Mile of Dimes Committee, Bryson B. Rash; theater committee, George A. Crouch and Carter T. Barron; sports committee, Col. Harvey L. Miller; women's activities, Mrs. Edward C. Magdeburger; public education committee, Frank La Falce and Rick J. La Falce; hotel committee, Frank E. Weakly; speaker's committee, A. Marvin Braverman; coin cards committee, James C. Russell; public and parochial schools committee, Dr. Hobart M. Corning and the Very Rev. Msgr. John S. Spence, cochairman; motion picture exchange committee, Jake Flax; uptown theaters committee, Shep Allen, and retail beverage stores committee, Milton S. Krongeim, sr.

Montgomery Reports 41st Polio Case of '49

Flight From 'Dry' D.C. To Wetter Spots Swells Travel Over Holiday

Peak of Exodus Expected Today; Railroad Passage Up 50 to 75 Pct.

The weekend holiday exodus from Washington was expected to move into high gear this afternoon.

The New Year's holiday, second long weekend in a row, will boost rail traffic in and out of the city by 50 to 75 percent above normal, officials estimated yesterday.

All northbound trains leaving the District late today will be in two sections, and trains returning from all directions late Monday and early Tuesday will be "split," according to Union Station records.

Government agencies, banks and many local business firms will close down after business today, not to reopen until Tuesday morning.

"Blue Law" May Be Cause

The exodus may be caused in part by the District's "blue law," prohibiting the sale of alcoholic beverages after midnight Saturday.

To meet this demand many after-hours "bottle" clubs for members only are prepared for capacity crowds. Baltimore night clubs, which will be permitted to remain open indefinitely Sunday morning, are expected to attract many Washingtonians who expect their thirst to extend beyond midnight.

The fact that New Year's Day falls on Sunday this year may have a sobering effect on traditional revelry of the eve.

Annual watch services are scheduled in many churches the night before 1950 begins, and several Catholic churches will take advantage of a special privilege granted in view of the holy year to conduct a holy hour at 11 p. m., followed by midnight mass.

Attendance at these services and celebration of the New Year in entertainment spots is expected to bring a buyers' market on the baby-sitting business.

The Central YMCA at 1736 G st. nw. will hold its annual open house program between 2 and 10 p. m. on Monday. It will include co-ed swimming, a tea dance, checker tournament, display of youth work and a roller skating exhibition.

The Edward Douglass White Council, Knights of Columbus of Arlington, will hold a New Year's Eve party and dance in the Terrace Room of National Airport from 10 p. m. until 3 a. m.

Table reservations for the National Guard Armory New Year Eve celebration are still available, it was announced yesterday. Gene Krupa and his band will play for a dance until 2:30 a. m. Tickets at $5 cover supper, dancing and entertainment.

The American Automobile Association renewed its plea for safe driving over crowded highways during the holiday.

"Unless car owners change their driving habits, we shall witness a duplication of the slaughter which took place over the long Christmas holiday," the AAA said.

Check 1949 Traffic Toll; 'Leave That Car Home'

The National Safety Council, making its annual holiday appeal for drivers to leave their cars in the garage and use public transportation, yesterday listed 2717 violent accidental deaths for 1949. The holiday totals, with traffic deaths shown in parenteses, are:

New Year's—309 (207); Memorial Day—413 (253); July 4th—711 (315); Labor Day—525 (394); Thanksgiving—179 (123), and Christmas—580 (413).

Junior High Girl Missing From Home Two Days

A 15-year-old, attractive Stuart Junior High School girl has been missing from her home two days, the Police Department reported yesterday.

She is Mary Francis Kitts, daughter of Oscar R. Kitts, 34, an elevator operator, who lives at 1119 Penn st. ne. Her father told police she left home Wednesday after an argument with his brother-in-law, Delbert Rollison, who also lives at the same address.

When last seen, the girl, described as 5 feet 2 with blue eyes and mature for her age, was wearing lipstick, high-heeled shoes, nylon stockings, and a black dress with short skating jacket.

You Can Take It or Leave It—Here's a New Year's Eve Idea

LIKE an oasis in the desert, an authority on what NOT to drink New Year's Eve came up yesterday with "just the thing" to conquer the District's drinking drought of Saturday midnight.

"We've just started putting it out, and it's very popular," said Mrs. C. C. Pulver.

SHE is director of the Non-Alcoholic Beverage Department of the District Women's Christian Temperance Union.

Even for those who prefer to "drink a cup o' kindness" until the curfew tolls, she said, the recipe might also prove helpful. Mrs. Pulver thinks it "might win them over, and it won't hurt them a bit."

"It" has a number of advantages, she confided, to devotees of Old Hangman's Noose. "It's healthful; you don't have any hangover, and it's good for you."

"IT" is ruby punch.

Take a pound of cranberries and two quarts—of water. Cook and strain. Add 1¾ cups of sugar. Chill. Just before serving, add the juice of six lemons and a bottle of ginger ale or charged water. Pour over a quart of orange ice and serve.

The carbonated beverage, Mrs. Pulver said, "gives it that little zip that people like so much."

OR—if ruby punch has no appeal—listen to the words of Alan W. Payne, the chairman of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board. Commenting on the District law that prohibits the sale of anything alcoholic after midnight Saturday, he said:

"I have assurance from the District Health and Water Departments that there will be millions of gallons of pure, filtered Potomac River water available for unlimited drinking."

Carlin Cites $50,000 Pact In Stock Suit

Charles C. Carlin jr., president and publisher of the Alexandria Gazette, yesterday moved to block legal action by his daughter Sara, 21, who claims she is entitled to 1200 shares of stock in the paper.

In a suit filed in Alexandria Court, Carlin asked that Miss Sara Perline Carlin be enjoined from prosecuting the court action. He cited an alleged "agreement" made between Carlin and his daughter wherein he was to buy the 1200 shares from his daughter for $50,000. He asked the court to force Miss Carlin to carry out the terms of the alleged agreement.

The Gazette Corp. is capitalized for $125,000 with 2500 shares of stock.

Miss Carlin, who lives with her mother, Mrs. R. R. Taylor, divorced wife of Carlin, at 1728 Abingdon dr., Alexandria, earlier instituted suit to force the Gazette corporation and John W. Tulloch, managing editor, to turn over to her the stock which was left in trust for her by her grandfather. Tulloch is trustee for the shares. Under terms of the will, the trust was to end when the girl became 21.

Miss Carlin's suit asked that if the stock is not returned to her she be awarded $100,000 in its stead.

Man Injured Critically in 3-Floor Fall

A 66-year-old retired railroad auditor was injured seriously early yesterday in a fall from the balcony of his third-floor apartment, police said.

In critical condition at Emergency Hospital is Leslie Boyd Farmer, of the Clifton Terrace Apartments, 14th and Clifton sts. nw. Hospitals attaches said he suffered back injuries and leg fractures.

Police found Farmer in a courtyard of the apartment building after a neighbor said she heard noises in the areaway.

Trial Is Continued Of Couple Charged With Delinquency

Trial of a Colmar Manor, Md., couple on charges of contributing to the delinquency of their four children was continued to February 16 yesterday in Hyattsville Police Court pending the father's efforts to obtain a new job.

Trial Justice Arthur P. Owens said he deferred action against Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Arthur after a closed hearing at which the father said he had "prospects for a new job and hope to get my family straightened out." The couple's children, ranging in age from 16 months to 9 years, will remain in foster homes under the supervision of the Prince Georges County Welfare Department until the case is disposed of, Judge Owens said.

The Arthurs were charged with contributing to the children's delinquency December 7 after police said they learned the father had spent his last few dollars to buy beer at a time when there was no food in the house for the children.

Silver Spring To Build More Parking Units

Silver Spring businessmen, forewarned by a trade increase during 1949 despite a drop throughout the Nation, are planning construction of multiple parking units next year.

This was made known yesterday by Charles H. Kopeland, executive secretary of the Silver Spring Board of Trade, along with the disclosure that community businessmen experienced an 18 percent business increase for the year.

Parking System Lauded

The Silver Spring boom, at a time when national trade figures took a drop of from 18 to 20 percent, was credited by Kopeland to the community's five-year-old free public parking system which permits easy access to stores by motoring shoppers.

Begun in 1944, the system now includes eight lots accommodating 5100 cars. A ninth, now under construction, will hold an additional 600, Kopeland said. The lots, owned by Montgomery County, are purchased and improved by funds realized from a tax levied on business property in the area.

Look to Next Year

"Judging from the capacity use of the lots during this Christmas season, we realized that if the present growth of the community continues something would have to be done before the holiday buying rush next year," he said.

"The whole thing has become a vicious cycle," the trade executive explained. "As more parking space is provided, more customers are attracted and in turn more parking space is required."

The multiple parking units will be built, under present plans, by private capital on privately owned lots, he said. No provision for charging parking fees is included in present plans, he emphasized.

300-Lb. Safe With $500 Taken From Pharmacy

Thieves removed a 300-pound safe containing $500 and papers from the Kensington Pharmacy, Lincoln ave. and Perry st., Kensington, some time Wednesday night, Montgomery County police reported yesterday.

The pharmacy's narcotics cabinet also was broken open, police said, but a check by the proprietor, James A. Parker, revealed nothing was missing.

Baroness Von Below Dead at 90

Baroness Nina R. von Below, a Washington hostess from the end of World War I until the middle of World War II, died late Wednesday night at the Oak Retreat, 1801 Park rd. nw. She was 90.

Baroness von Below, a native of Columbia, S. C., was the wife of the late Baron Hans von Below, chief of staff of the German army on the eastern front in World War I. He died here in 1933. He was buried in Rock Creek Cemetery.

BARONESS VON BELOW
Death comes at 90

The baroness married von Below in 1907, and because of his connection with the Augusta Guards, the Empress' regiment, she was a member of the royal household and a friend of Kaiser Wilhelm. She lived in Germany through World War I.

She came to Washington about 1920 and established herself socially. Her parties, at her former residence at 2024 16th st. nw., were always formal.

D. C. a "Madhouse"

In 1945, she sold her heavy furniture and left Washington.

Her comment then was, "I'm very sorry to leave, but it's not the Washington I knew and loved. It's a madhouse now!"

Until 1948, she spent winters in Florida and summers in the mountains near Asheville, N. C. Returning here then, she lived in a hotel. She had been ill about six months.

Baroness von Below, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Campbell M. Bryce, was first married to the late Frederick Turnbull of Philadelphia. A son of that marriage, Frederick Dale Turnbull of Washington, survives.

Leaves Niece Here

Her only other survivors in Washington are a niece, Mrs. Margaret W. Brown; two great nephews, Robert and Jack Brown, and two great nieces, Miss Marguerite Trenholm Woolley, and Mrs. Daniel Clarence List.

Funeral services will be at 11 a. m. at St. John's Church, 16th and H sts. nw., with the Rev. Dr. C. Leslie Glenn officiating. Burial will be private.

Williamstown, Mass., Dec. 29. (AP). Dr. Tyler Dennett, Pulitzer Prize historian and former Williams College president and State Department adviser, died today of a heart attack in Geneva, N. Y., associates said. He was 66.

Dr. Dennett

A specialist in American relations with the Far East, Dr. Dennett served as historical adviser to the State Department from 1929 to 1931, after five years as publications chief for the department.

In 1931 he left Washington to teach international relations at Princeton, and in 1934 was elected president of Williams where he had played on the varsity football team 30-odd years before.

Three years later, the trustees announced his resignation. Dr. Dennett said that disagreement with the trustees over financial policies of Williams, brought to a head by their action of purchasing a large hotel property near the campus over his protests, led to the rift.

He retired to devote his time to historical research and writing.

In 1933 he won the Pulitzer Prize for his biography of John Hay. His other books included: "Americans in Eastern Asia," "Roosevelt and the Russo-Japanese War," "Lincoln and the Civil War."

Born in Spencer, Wis., he was educated at Williams, Union Theological Seminary and Johns Hopkins. He held honorary degrees from Harvard, Princeton, Williams, Amherst, Columbia and several other colleges.

Besides his widow, the former Maybelle Raymond of Washington, he leaves a daughter, Audrey, and three sons, Raymond, director of the World Peace Foundation of Boston; Tyler E. of Cleveland, and Laurence A., a student at Hobart College.

Police Honor Inspector Smith At Impressive Funeral Rites

The Washington Post

POLICE OFFICIALS (RIGHT) SALUTE AS CASKET OF INSPECTOR SMITH IS CARRIED TO GRAVE IN CEDAR HILL

Inspector Milton D. Smith, 62-year-old assistant Superintendent of Police, who died Monday, yesterday received an inspector's funeral, one of the largest in the history of the Metropolitan Police Department.

While more than 200 policemen, from Maj. Robert J. Barrett and Inspector Floyd A. Truscott to a number of privates, participated in funeral and burial rites, other members of the force stood at attention in front of No. 2 Precinct and the Municipal Center as the procession detoured by those buildings.

Services were at the Hines funeral home, with the Rev. Daniel Justice, jr., of St. Luke's, and Dr. Hirl A. Kester, Protestant chaplain of the Police Department, officiating.

An honor guard of high-ranking police officials was headed by Barrett and Truscott. Eight police privates, four from Smith's immediate staff and four from bureaus formerly headed by him, were bearers. The Policeman's Association, of which the inspector was a former president, provided a color guard.

Attending also were two platoons of Metropolitan police, and delegations from the White House, Park, Maryland and Virginia State police, as well as a squad from the Fire Department. Music was provided by the Police Band.

From the funeral chapel, to Cedar Hill Cemetery, traffic police at intersections cleared the way for the automobiles and buses in the procession and stood at salute as it passed.

The Police Band led the procession from the cemetery gate to the grave. Flags at all police buildings were at half-staff during the services.

Police officials said yesterday's type of ceremonial honors will be used in the future at funerals of outstanding policemen. It was the first time such a ritual was used here in a police funeral, they explained.

Inspector Smith lived at 2628 49th st. nw.

Survivors include his wife, a son, Milton A., assistant general counsel of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States; three sisters, Mrs. Albert E. Scholz, Mrs. Charles W. Eaton and Mrs. Roland Nutt, all of Washington; a brother, Joseph Smith of Tuckerton, N. J., a stepdaughter, Mrs. Howard L. Roth of Washington, and two stepsons, Elroy Horton of Washington and Bradford W. Horton of California.

J. Van Ness Philip Dies; Former State Dept. Official

J. Van Ness Philip, 83, former State Department official and member of one of Washington's oldest families, died yesterday at his home in Hudson, N. Y., after a long illness.

Before his retirement from the State Department in 1945, he served in Cuba and the Philippines during the Spanish-American War and was a staff officer of the Fourth Division in World War I.

He was the United States representative on the State Department's Pan American Highway Finance Committee from 1936 to 1942.

He served as advisory assistant to the Division of American Republics of the State Department, having been previously appointed to the post of assistant chief of the War Department Bureau of Insular Affairs by President Theodore Roosevelt.

Before taking this job in 1901, Major Philip helped organize the first detachment of the Philippine Scouts.

A descendant of Maj. Gen. John P. Van Ness, a member of the House of Representatives from New York, he was born in Georgetown. His ancestor's wife, the former Marcia Burns, was heiress to much of the property on which downtown Washington now stands.

The Van Ness mansion occupied the present site of the Pan American Union. General Van Ness was the first mayor of Washington, when the city had such an official.

Major Philip was the son of Col. William Henry and Eliza Worthington Philip. He studied at Claverack Military Academy, Claverack, N. Y.; at St. Paul's Military Academy, Garden City, Long Island; at Princeton University and at Georgetown University Law School.

During his military service, he was adjutant of the Fourth United States Volunteers in Cuba; a member of the Thirty-first Volunteers in the Philippines, and an aide to General Ordway of the District National Guard.

Although he spent most of his life in Washington, Major Philip maintained his permanent residence at "Talvera" in Claverack, N. Y., where he developed fruit orchards in recent years.

He was a neighbor and close friend of the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt, whose campaign for the New York State Senate he helped organize. Major Philip's interest in hunting and riding was extensive. He won what was considered the first steeplechase in the Washington area on a horse named Hara Kiri at the Chevy Chase Club in 1902.

He was a member of the Metropolitan and Alibi Clubs of Washington and of the Ivy Club at Princeton University.

Major Philip is survived by his widow, the former Helen Monroe Stott.; two sons, J. Van Ness Philip, jr., and Nicholas Worthington Philip, all of Hudson; a sister, Mrs. J. P. Stark, Mayport, Fla., and a brother, Hoffman Philip, of Santa Barbara, Calif., former United States Ambassador to Chile.

A. H. McMahon Dead; Served Britain Abroad

London, Dec. 29 (AP).—Sir Arthur Henry McMahon, whose World War letters to an Arab potentate led the Arabs to claim Palestine, died today in his London hotel suite. He was 87.

Sir Henry spent about 30 years in the Indian civil service, then was appointed Britain's first High Commissioner for Egypt.

While serving in this post, Sir Henry exchanged a long series of letters with Sherif Hussein of Mecca, a leader of the Arab fight for independence from Turkey during World War I.

British representatives on the committee maintained Sir Henry's letters had not included Palestine among Arab territories that should be independent.

But the Arabs claimed "Palestine was in fact, and in intention, included by both parties to the McMahon-Hussein correspondence in the area of Arab independence."

Two years earlier, Sir Henry wrote in a letter to the London Times:

"I feel it my duty to state, and I do so definitely and emphatically, that it was not intended by me to include Palestine in the area in which Arab independence was promised. I also had every reason to believe . . . that the fact that Palestine was not included in my pledge was well understood by King Hussein."

Mary Haworth's Mail

With History of Some Emotional Insecurity In Marriage, Young Wife Is Deeply Troubled By Husband's Tolerance of Flirt's Advances

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have been married for eight years and have three children. John and I have built a strong and wonderful marriage after weathering our early troubles.

I am inclined to be overly possessive because of a basic insecurity complex, although I wasn't aware of this latent tendency until John committed a minor act of infidelity early in our marriage. His thoughtless disloyalty was a shattering blow to my self esteem, and in spite of his contrite patience and steady love, it was a long time before I could feel true faith in either him or myself. A better balanced person would have recovered much sooner.

I envied John's pride and trust in me when other men were attentive, and I hoped the time would come when I could be equally confident. Because of the incident we reached a better understanding and developed a code for our marriage. Looking at our agreement constructively, it is the Golden Rule; destructively it is "sauce for the gander." But as long as we continue to love each other, the constructive application will guide us, I am sure.

Wife Would Like to Be Nonchalant

AT PRESENT I am greatly improved. Like any normal person, I may feel an occasional twinge of jealousy but can dismiss it without letting it mar an evening or a week. Superficially my problem concerns an acquaintance whose husband is much older than she. When we first met Abby at a party she told John of her marital troubles. He felt sincerely sorry for her and went out of his way to be nice to her. Instinctively I didn't like or trust her, but I was silent, fearing that I was slipping back into my old possessive ways.

As we began to see more of this couple, Abby became flagrantly inviting towards my husband. I decided I had been patient long enough and discussed the situation with him. He agreed with me that she was "on the make" and not just a poor misunderstood wife, as he had first thought.

We continue to be exposed to Abby at social gatherings, and although John doesn't encourage her, she seizes every opportunity to be near him and practically purrs at my obvious discomfort. I know my manner should be serene and perhaps a little amused, but I am not much of an actress. Have you any suggestions that will help me treat Abby's maneuvering with the nonchalance it deserves? G. K.

Is Wife Accusing Herself Unfairly?

DEAR G. K.: Stop kicking yourself around for the defections of other people. You talk as if it were your emotional distortions and not John's minor infidelity early in marriage that first splintered your confidence in his character; also as if you have need to apologize for feeling miserably opposed to Abby's tricky play for your husband's sex-interest; also as if he were wholly blameless for her current bold maneuvering.

Maybe you have a basic insecurity complex but don't be too sure. Maybe you have a highly intuitive perception of lurking danger when it exists, and there may be a diffuse lack of rectitude in John's personality that keeps your protective instincts anxiously alerted to maintain conjugal unity and married continuity if possible.

The first would be a sick condition; the second a realistic aliveness to risks you are running in staying your "trust" in an unstable spouse; and if the latter is the case, it is good sense to face the truth instead of dividing your forces by trying to smother legitimate concern about his current flirtation with Abby.

Poor Strategy to Act Helpless

THE BEST WAY to upset Abby's game is to act with delicate emphasis, right in her face, to indicate that you are very positively John's wife, very much in love with him, confident of his love for you—and furthermore, ready and willing to use your wits, your tongue and your elbows, openly and unashamed if necessary, to keep her from muscling-in, now that she's made her intentions clear.

When you take that tack you'll profit, for it amounts to being sincere, courageous, warmly feminine and strong in dealing with a type of person who tramples delicacy. Also it is a course which embodies wifely finesse and greatly flatters the male ego, because it demonstrates ardent allegiance to your man and militant love of him. You couldn't choose a worse strategy than hanging back, looking stricken, and that's why Abby gloats when you do. Consider the saying, "Meet fire with fire," and abandon the folly of trying to seem unaware, amused or complacently indifferent. M. H.

"COME let us fill the flowing bowl until it doth run over" is a good song for the New Year—and a good recipe for hospitality.

Refreshing Resolution:

Punch Bowl Will Start The New Year Right

NOTHING like starting the New Year right—and no better way to start it than with a flowing bowl of some traditional holiday beverage. After the bowl—of eggnog, punch or wassail—has made the rounds, a cold buffet of ham and turkey will give your guests a head start into 1950 with best appetite forward.

Here are four sure-fire beverages, all designed to meet the requirements of tradition as well as the needs of easy modern entertaining.

KENTUCKY EGG NOG for 12. Stir 12 egg yolks with 12 tablespoonfuls of sugar until smooth. Slowly stir in one pint bourbon whisky and one pint unwhipped double cream. Fold in the stiffly beaten whites of 12 eggs. Stir in an additional half-pint of bourbon. Chill until serving time. Then fold in one pint whipped double cream. Sprinkle with cinnamon or nutmeg. Serve paper-thin slices of Virginia ham between beaten biscuit, or everyday ham on buttered, tiny, hot baking-powder biscuits.

TEETOTAL PUNCH FOR 50. This is a standard fruit punch good all year round. Make a syrup by boiling 1¼ cups water and 2½ cups sugar together for 10 minutes. Add to this and allow to stand for an hour, 1 cup lemon juice, 2 cups orange juice, 1 cup strong tea, 2 cups white grape juice, 2 cups commercial raspberry syrup, and 1 cup chopped maraschino cherries and their juice. Add to this enough ice water to make about 2 gallons of liquid. A quart of charged water, added just before serving time, may be substituted for a quart of ice water. Pour over block of ice in punch bowl. Serve with tea sandwiches and petits fours.

WILLIAMSBURG WASSAIL for 12. Stir ¼ teaspoon ground ginger, ¼ teaspoon allspice, ½ teaspoon cinnamon, 1/8 teaspoon ground cloves, and ⅛ teaspoon mace or nutmeg in ¼ cup hot water. Add to 1 bottle dry red wine and heat mixture slowly. Add 1 cup sugar and stir till dissolved. Separate 5 eggs. Fold beaten yolks into beaten whites and pour into punch bowl. Add the heated wine and whip until frothy. To keep the wassail tradition intact, you may add to the bowl 5 hot baked apples. Serve with chopped-ginger cookies and pfeffernusse. Excellent versions of both can be bought by the package.

TOM AND JERRY for 20. Separate 12 eggs. Beat whites stiff, sifting in 2 cups sugar. Beat yolks till light yellow, sprinkling with 1 teaspoon each ground cinnamon and cloves. Gradually add 4 ounces Jamaica rum. Pour into whites in a large bowl and heat together. Into each earthenware Tom-and-Jerry mug go 2 tablespoons of this batter, 2 ounces of bourbon and boiling hot water or hot milk to fill the mug. (Cut this serving in half if you're using china punch cups.) There are those who float 1 teaspoon of cognac on top and then dust with nutmeg. This set-up calls for a device to keep milk or water hot. A spirit lamp is decorative. Serve with lebkuchen and wine sticks. You can buy these packaged.

Ask Anne About Selecting Furniture

I am planning to buy furniture soon, and I have decided on modern furnture. Since this is my first experience in buying furniture, I would appreciate your suggestions as to what qualities I should look for in the wood, upholstery, stuffing, and any other hints. N. T.

One authority has said that when buying furniture one should look where he is not supposed to look. The things he should look for are signs of carelessness and short cuts such as roughly finished underparts, drippy varnish and nailed joints. Such evidences of a slap-dash job probably indicate poor construction throughout. The cost of a piece of furniture is determined by workmanship every bit as much as by the material in it, and workmanship has really more to do with the wear it will give.

To be more specific——

In buying furniture made entirely of wood, check to see if it stands level on the floor—no wobbling. If it wobbles don't assume it is because the floor on which it is presently standing is uneven.

Look at the joints. Furniture put together with nails does not stand up. Insist on mortise and tenon points or double or triple dowels. A mortise and tenon joint is one where an extension or tongue cut in one piece of wood fits into a groove cut in the other piece. A dowel is a wooden peg or pin that fits firmly into holes bored into the wood to join the pieces of wood together.

Another sign of well made furniture is a thin sheet of wood called dustproofing between the drawers. Center drawer glides or substantial side glides indicate good workmanship. Pull the drawers in and out. They should glide smoothly and exactly fit when shut.

Drawers should be smooth and finished inside and on the sides and bottom. Unfinished drawers may or may not be a sign of poor construction. However, if unfinished, the purchaser should wax or otherwise finish them to prevent absorption of moisture, warping, and sticking during humid months.

In wooden chairs and tables look for corner blocks under seats and table top. These blocks should be screwed to the corners to prevent the joint from loosening under pressure.

Because green lumber has been used some in furniture since the war, look for bulges and buckling, particularly at the back of furniture, on table tops, and so forth.

Because joints and materials used in the foundation construction of upholstered pieces are not visible, a purchaser is pretty much at the mercy of the dealer when buying them. Right here I add that a reputable dealer is most important — especially when buying furniture.

The frame of upholstered pieces should be a hard, solid wood such as ash, birch, hard maple, Gum is often used and serves well if you do not wish to invest the money necessary to buy a better wood. But be sure you are not paying for a hard wood and getting gum.

The frame of upholstered pieces should be put together with dowels, mortise and tenon as described above.

Textile webbing is the most satisfactory base for the springs. It should be placed closely together, interlaced over and under, front to back.

The springs should be tied eight times, not just four so they will be held firmly in place.

Upholstered furniture can be purchased with a muslin covering instead of expensive upholstery and that is a good way to save money—especially if you expect to use slipcovers.

Of the upholstery fabrics, cotton or wool are most durable. For the price, cotton is strong, less subject to snagging, sanitary and mothproof. Avoid loosely woven upholstery fabrics.

The better quality upholstered furniture is stuffed with hair—horse, hog, or cattle. Medium quality stuffings are cotton, felt, or moss or combination of these and hair. It's best to get one with a greater proportion of hair, if possible, because it will retain resiliency longer. The material in stuffing may be mentioned on the label; if not, one must take the dealer's word for it.

Latex upholstery is good, but still expensive. It doesn't sag and is insect proof.

Of the furniture woods, mahogany, walnut, birch, maple, oak are durable and attractive. A good quality veneered piece will give as good wear as furniture made of solid wood. Unfortunately in the minds of many, veneering is synonymous with low quality. Of course, this is not true and the lovely patterns of the wood grain are possible only when the veneering process is used.

One final word—it really does not pay to buy cheap furniture. With cheap furniture, as it is with babies, it isn't the initial cost, but the upkeep.

Is there a place in Washington or vicinity that renovates cribs? The crib I plan to use needs new hardware and a new latch to keep the side up. J. B.

If this is a standard, nationally advertised crib, a shop on 18th st. which repairs all sorts of baby equipment will put new hardware on it. If they do not have the hardware in stock they can order and get it quite quickly. If it is an off-brand crib, they may not be able to repair it. I suggest you call them at Hudson 8289.

Can you tell me where I may obtain the name and address of the manufacturer (a New England woman, I recall) of whole wheat bread made in the old fashioned grist mill manner? There have been several references to the story of its manufacture; I believe one was recently carried in your Sunday magazine section. Can it be obtained in this area or by mail? J. L.

Can any of our readers supply this information for J. L.?

MISS MARTHA MITCHELL

By Sonia Stein

IF YOU'VE noticed a shortage of union suits in the shops lately it may be because they've been turned into ratskins and batskins and catskins and bunnyskins and skunkskins and foxskins.

The Washington School of Ballet's "Christmas Gift for the Children" is a performance of "Hansel and Gretel" to be given January 2 in Constitution Hall. In this ballet are a collection of Washington small fry transformed into rats, cats, bats and bunnies by the magic wand of the Misses Lisa Gardiner and Mary Day, directors of the school.

With this magic wand (plus many paste pots and the aid of two seamstresses) they've turned several dozen suits of "longies" into imaginative animal costumes.

Said Miss Day who did the shopping, "I bought a dozen or so union suits at a time. I can't imagine what the salesclerks thought I'd be using them for!"

Adding realism to the show, the fireflies' tail-lights are tiny flashlights. The angels' golden horns were made from layer after layer of The Washington Post pages, wrapped into cones and gilded to an angelic brightness. From suit boxes came the angels' harps. The wings are feathered with gauze.

FOR a while it looked as if there wouldn't be any bear in the forest scene, because there wasn't a suitable bear costume. But passing through a department store on her way to the union suit department, Miss Day spied a brown chenille bedspread and . . . Well, there's going to be a bear after all.

The 100 roles in the Gardiner-Day version of "Hansel and Gretel" will be danced by 86 students, ranging from age 7 to 20-ish, plus two teachers, some of them doubling in brass—or union suits. Miss Gardiner will narrate.

Miss Day will be the wicked old witch who tries to eat Hansel. Her little black cat will be Martha Mitchell who's father, National Symphony Conductor Howard Mitchell, will conduct the orchestra.

This is the first venture of its kind the august National Symphony has engaged in, but not very likely the last. Quite apart from being a proud father—Daughter Lorraine is also in the ballet as an angel, a fox and a gingerbread boy—Mr. Mitchell is delighted with the rehearsals on a purely artistic basis. The music for the ballet is all from Haydn—Symphonies 104, 93, 103, 88, 98 and the Surprise Symphony all lending bits and pieces to the entrechats and arabesques.

PRICE of tickets (60 cents to $2.40), was kept low at Mr. Mitchell's suggestion. He's a great believer in more music for more children. As a result, they've sold like hot cakes—hot gingerbread men, even. In other words, they're sold out!

Other leading roles will be danced by Miss Joan Levy as Gretel, Miss Marilyn Richtmeyer as Hansel, Miss Tony Chase as the neighbor's child, Miss Barbara Cole and Paul Keyes as the parents, and Miss Christine Mayer, the winner of the first ballet scholarship ever granted by the D. C. Chapter of the National Association of Arts and granted by D. C. Chapter, National Association of Arts and Letters.

Jobé Says... Bloused and Belted—The Two-Piece Look

The two-piece suit dress—that perennial favorite of the American woman—has a brand new look this spring, thanks to Mr. Dior of Paris!

The jacket tops are soft and bloused and belted—with smart dropped shoulders and wide set-in sleeves that give the new bulky top look that identifies Spring 1950 fashions. Skirts are either actually slim or are pleated so that they look slim in repose and show fullness only in action.

'Strip Tease' Will Benefit Thrift Shop

By Genevieve Reynolds

WHEN members of the Junior League of Washington turn out for a New Year's luncheon on Wednesday, January 4, at 12:30 p. m. they'll wear as many garments as possible.

In strip tease fashion, excess clothing will be discarded. And all will go to the Thrift Shop.

Prizes will be awarded to the member wearing the greatest number of articles, to the one whose donations are most valuable, and to the funniest costume. Proceeds from the sale of the clothes will go to the Junior League's welfare fund. Following the luncheon a business meeting will be held—both at Hotel 2400.

Drive Launched

THE D. C. Department, American Legion Auxiliary, recently launched a drive to obtain more donors to the Red Cross Blood Bank. Mrs. Esther Carrico was named department chairman of Red Cross activities.

While many District Auxiliary members are regular blood donors, greater numbers are needed in order to provide blood to veterans and their families during emergencies, according to Mrs. Mary Spence, community service chairman and sponsor of the current projects.

The Family Scrapbook

By Dr. Ernest O. Osborne

There's quite a little of the Spartan in many of us parents. We hardly would expect our boys to give no sign of distress should a fox be gnawing on the ɔ as it did on the brave Spartan lad, but we do definitely discourage them from reacting to pain or other disturbing things by crying. The phrase, "Big boys don't cry," is used pretty commonly.

To discourage crying is not in itself bad. What is questionable is the way we sometimes keep ourselves from showing sympathy to a youngster who has hurt himself.

One needn't go to extremes. But the pat on the back, holding his hand or comforting him with "Too bad, old boy—it'll be better soon" seems to be in order. The important thing is that we say or do what will encourage our youngster to face the problem or difficulty, to neither run away from it nor feel completely overwhelmed by it. Encouragement definitely has its place.

Too much holding in of one's feelings is also questionable. To express pain, sadness, anger through action and words is usually a better way of getting rid of the feeling than bottling it up inside one's self.

MISS MARGARET GLENN

Holiday time is debutante time for this pair of pretty girls

Town Topics

More Debs, More Parties!

By Marie McNair and Elizabeth Maguire

MR. AND MRS. SIDNEY KENT LEGARE'S ball last evening at the Sulgrave Club for their debutante daughter, Miss Anne Legare, was a follow-up of their tea last week, at which she was presented to her parents' friends.

Among the 400 guests at the dance were a group of this season's debutantes and their beaux and some young people from out-of-town as well as the hosts' personal friends.

Green smilax trailed throughout the ballroom and drawing room suite and quantities of white flowers were also used in decoration.

The debutante wore a bouffant gown of white tulle and taffeta and carried a bouquet of small white orchids.

Before the dance Miss Legare shared honors with Miss Betty Smith, debutante daughter of Mrs. James M. Barnes, at a dinner given by Capt. and Mrs. Edwin Graves. Mrs. Alec Legare, aunt of the debutante, was also hostess at a dinner and others who entertained were Mrs. Robert Hooker and Joseph Alsop.

Meyer Davis and his orchestra came down from New York to play. A hit of the evening was his song, "Anne, Anne, Anne," composed by him for Miss Legare.

MISS MARGARET GLENN, daughter of the Rev. C. Leslie Glenn, was presented to society yesterday at a tea dance at the parsonage on Farragut Square. With her father and post-debutante sister, Miss Georgiana Sibley Glenn, the debutante received guests from 5:30 to 7:30 p. m. Sidney's orchestra played. Later, there was a dinner at the Metropolitan Club given by Dr. Glenn in honor of his debutante daughter's good friend and former classmate, Miss Nancy Hamilton.

For her debut, Miss Glenn wore a charming frock of white dotted net over silk faille, fashioned with narrow shoulder straps, tight bodice and very full skirt. Her flowers were an old fashioned bouquet of pink roses.

Miss Glenn attended Potomac School with Miss Hamilton, and later Westover School. She is now a freshman at Bryn Mawr College. A classmate at Westover, Miss Cecily Branch of Providence, R. I., attended Guests at the dinner honoring Miss Hamilton were Misses Anstiss McCormick - Goodhart, Patricia Mulligan, Louise Hoover, Eugenia Chase, the debutante and her sister, Miss Georgiana Glenn. Escorts included John Frazer, Peter Sturtevant, James Perrin, Joseph Green, David Watson, James Watson, John Dickinson, Dr. Crawford Brown, David Carpenter and Wilson Hurley.

MRS. ERNEST L. SMITH gave a luncheon yesterday at the Columbia Country Club honoring Miss Elizabeth Phelps Silver. Guests included Misses Helen Clark Walker, Sue Walker, LaVerne Megee and Maria Theresa Somary, all debutantes of the season.

Also from the sub-deb group, Misses Ilse Scholten, "Sunny" Sturtevant, Virginia Ford, Mary Lou Smith, Anne Showell, Jean King, Mary Ann Robb, Barbara Cross and Marian Alexander of Annapolis, Md.

MISS CARMELITA DEIMEL, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry L. Deimel, gave an eggnog party on Wednesday at her home on Macomb st. Guests were a group of students from Duke University where Miss Deimel is a sophomore and a number of Army and Navy juniors.

Assisting were Mrs. Robert W. Leavitt, the hostess' sister; Miss Barbara Jones of Baltimore; Misses Nan Roberts and Lucy Allensworth, and Miss Deimel's sorority sisters of Alpha Phi, Misses Phyllis Dodson, Pat Whitaker and Janet Brokenshire, who are here from Allentown, Pa., for a few days.

TWO of the prettiest debutantes of the season, Miss Marjorie Morgenstierne and Miss Judith Waldrop, were honored Wednesday at a luncheon given by Mrs. Willard A. Holbrook at the Chevy Chase Club. Misses Ann Cates, Florence Walker, Cornelia Bingham, Janeth Lloyd, Lynne Kerwin, Kathryn Holmes and Polly Plum attended.

MR. AND MRS. FRANCIS THOMAS entertained yesterday at a cocktail party for two debutantes, Miss Tomajean Akers and Miss Cornelia Bingham. The party was given at their house on Kalorama circle from 5 to 7:30 p. m., among the young guests were Hugh Thomas and Francis Thomas, jr., who are home from college

MR. AND MRS. FRANK REDIKER joined the group of holiday hosts and entertained at a cocktail dance yesterday in the east room of the Mayflower.

Mrs. Rediker, the former Princess Halim, has her daughter, Princess Nevine Halim, a student at Bryn Mawr, with her for the holidays and yesterday she received with her mother and step-father.

Sidney's orchestra played for dancing. Christmas greens and flowers decorated the room and small tables ringed the room for the buffet supper.

"Perfect Public Servant"

Indonesia Loves a Fat Man —Which Is All Right With The U. S. State Department

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

TWO-HUNDRED-AND-SIXTY-POUND H. Merle Cochran, our first Ambassador to the newly created United States of Indonesia, is the perfect public servant. A widower, completely dedicated to work, his personal life is nil. He eschews sports and his sole hobby, indulged unstintingly and with relish, is eating.

Last spring, during difficult negotiations in Batavia, he arrived at his office at 8 a. m. and seldom quit before 8 p. m. Then, after dinner, he went straight to bed. He confounded those who believe weight is a health hazard by being the sole United States official who never caught a tropical bug and never lost an hour's toil.

The rugged Cochran constitution is partially self-made. Hoosier-born, ill during his twenties, he journeyed to Arizona, where he spent four years in outdoor ranch work and completely recaptured his health, Ambassador Cochran has been in the Foreign Service almost 34 years. For a good part of his career he was a Foreign Service inspector, rated not only the most efficient but the toughest of all.

A Foreign Service inspector is a glorified policeman, accountant and public relations expert rolled into one. He enjoys the closest approach to carte blanche of any member of the Foreign Service. If he finds a member of an embassy staff inefficient, he says so. If he thinks one intemperate, he can so report to Washington with impunity. Mr. Cochran's diplomatic background is the most complete in the Foreign Service for, as inspector, he has visited, with the possible exception of half a dozen, every one of our overseas posts.

Merle Cochran was pulled off an inspection job in the Moscow Embassy to become United States representative on the United Nations Commission for Indonesia, then meeting in Java. While struggling with this tough chore, he was further elevated to the post of United States Ambassador to Pakistan.

But he never got to Karachi. Besides disproving the gloomy popular assumption that an Indonesian settlement was impossible, this plumpish diplomat demonstrated that Indonesia (as well as the proverbial everybody) loves a fat man. In Mr. Cochran's case, Indonesia loved him enough to demand (in polite diplomatic terms) that he become their first United States Ambassador. Which, in due course, he became.

Serious, modest, he's never flustered except when asked about himself. Recently, beseiged by newsmen, he avoided all but one or two. Asked about his personal achievements, he flushed like a kid, attributing any successes in which he figured to other State Department officials.

WITH Congress opening next week, the congressional ladies are trickling back to town and readying for the Congressional Club's open-house reception on January 8.

The Congressional Club, which occupies handsome quarters on New Hampshire ave., is, as far as we know, the only club incorporated by an act of Congress. The present building, the second occupied by the club, was built on land belonging to Mrs. Henderson of 16th st. castle fame, and paid for later when the young organization's finances became more stable. It was opened, incidentally, with tremendous fanfare, at a reception tendered President-elect and Mrs. Howard Taft, back in 1908. Today, when the price of "everything except dues" has risen, it's quite a tussle keeping the club solvent. Dues are $25 annually and only wives or hostesses of Congressmen, present and former, are eligible for active membership. So each year a money-raising project is evolved to keep the budget balanced. This spring, there's to be a bazaar called an All-State Fair. Specialties from every State will be on sale and, since there'll be considerable competition, it ought to be great fun. Last year, the congressional ladies raised a tidy sum with a new edition of their cookbook.

The Congressional Club's aims, printed in its charter are threefold: first, to promote acquaintances among the members; second, to facilitate social intercourse; third, to provide a place of meeting which may help to secure for them the advantages of life in the National Capital. The club gives its members a good time. There's a meeting every Friday afternoon during the winter season, at which guest celebrities appear, two dinner-dances a month, two formal luncheons a month to which members may invite outsiders, an informal luncheon every Monday after a stint of Red Cross work. Besides, some four special entertainments are staged during the months between New Year's and June.

Mr. and Mrs. Preu Entertain Young Set

MR. AND MRS. FRED PREU gave a dinner for 30 young people last evening honoring Miss Anne Piggott and Miss Elizabeth MacGowan. Miss Piggott is leaving with her parents on January 6 for London, where her father, Charles Snowden Piggott, will be stationed as Scientific Attache and Chief Science Officer at the American Embassy.

Arrives for Weekend

Miss Gertrude F. Brown of New York will arrive today to spend the New York holiday with Mrs. Nina Douglass Wysor and Miss Marjorie L. Spelts. Miss Brown has recently returned from South America.

Col. Hough, Lucy Hayes to Wed

Announcement was made today by Commodore and Mrs. Webb Cook Hayes, II, of Spiegel Grove, Fremont, Ohio, of the engagement of their niece, Lucy Webb Hayes, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Sherman Hayes and great-granddaughter of President Rutherford B. Hayes, to Lieut. Col. Lloyd Webster Hough, United States Army, son of Mrs. Lloyd W. Hough of Savannah, Ga.

Plans have been made for an April wedding at Spiegel Grove. The bride-to-be is a graduate of the Flintridge School for Girls, Flintridge, Calif., and Chevy Chase Junior College, Washington, D.C.

The prospective bridegroom is a member of the West Point Class of 1940 and a graduate of The Command and General Staff School of Fort Leavenworth and is now stationed at Fort Belvoir, Va., on the staff of Maj. Gen. D. L. Weart.

Returns to Washington

Miss Elizabeth Howry has returned to Washington for the winter and has leased Mrs. Cleveland McCauley's house on Olive st. in Georgetown. Miss Howry now makes her year-round home in Jamestown, R. I. Her sister, Miss Mary Howry, will spend the winter in Mexico.

On the Town

By Georganne Williamson

NEW Year's Eve in District night spots will be just like New Year's Eve in wide-open New York—until New Year's, that is. Then you'll have to toast 1950 in sparkling water (see the verse below). The festivities will go on past midnight in most places, but the merriment will have to ride on fuel already taken aboard.

THE following contribution from Robert Thompson of The Washington Post news staff describes the shortcircuit the New York merrymaker will run into at midnight Saturday.

Soon upon a midnight dreary, comes a New Year's not so cheery,
Cause you can't obtain a drink at even a licensed bottle store.
We'll be nodding, nearly napping, 'cause there won't be any tapping,
Of a waiter gently rapping, waiting while we order more.
'Tis some curse upon us, bred of curious legal lore—
Only this and nothing more.
Ah, distinctly we'll remember, it's indeed a bleak December,
When the calendar can dismember celebrations that're public lore.
But the law, much to our sorrow, says no drinks until tomorrow.
We can't even beg or borrow, though we thirst at every pore.
New Year's comes on Sunday, every bar must shut its door—
Only this and nothing more.
Recently, the rum dispensers, risking dry enthusiasts' censures,
Begged in tones that were intenser than the pleas they made before,
Please, we ask you Mr. Truman, make your New Year's Eve more human,
Give us time to serve our public, those whose comfort we adore.
Only this and nothing more.
Also to the city Commission, to Congressmen who boast a mission,
A mandate on atomic fission and on ways to make of life a bore,
Went the plea for Sunday liberty from the rule of law books hoar.
But the law is firm on Sunday closing until Monday—
Only this and nothing more.

Outwitting Your Years

Sickness of the Soul Usually Needs Special Care

By Clarence William Lieb, M. D.

Dr. Lieb, a graduate of Harvard Medical School in 1914, was active in medical research for years. After 1930 his practice was confined to geriatrics, the branch of medicine concerned with old age. He is now retired. This is a condensation, in six chapters, of Dr. Lieb's book, "Outwitting Your Years," published by Prentice-Hall, Inc.

CHAPTER V.

ONE of the first lessons a physician learns is that there are some sicknesses which do not yield to ordinary remedial measures.

They seem chronic without cause, acute without reason. These mysterious ailments are growing more common. And they are found most frequently among those who, one would think, should be most well and happy—those bustling men and women who are outstanding successes in business and arts.

Unaccustomed to pity themselves or others, these folks are helpless when at last they drive themselves in vain and suddenly realize that the things they were accustomed to do with joy they can no longer accomplish even with pain.

These people are suffering with soul sickness.

THE soul! That's something a mere doctor is supposed to know nothing about. And he doesn't, any more than anybody else does. But he can think, can't he?

And if he is much of a doctor, he does. Because any physician knows that there are diseases—very real physical ones—that prey on the body through the mind, but do not originate in the mind. They come from an intangible something which for lack of another name, we call the soul.

One of the strangest cases of soul sickness I have ever known was that of a man I shall call John.

His case is noteworthy not because the man died—he deserved the death to which he sentenced himself—but because of the extraordinary conduct of his wife.

For years Mrs. John had known that her husband maintained a mistress, in the same apartment house in which they lived. Never by look, word, or action did Mrs. John permit the man she loved to know that she even suspected he was unfaithful. But, finally, John's conscience began to trouble him.

He tried to induce his mistress to move out of the building, but she would not. Then John began to brood over the brazenness of his liaison; his health broke with astonishing speed.

On his deathbed John tried again and again to confess everything to his wife, so that his soul might pass in peace. But she told him his mind was wandering, that he was the most faithful husband that ever lived, and smoothed his brow and hushed him as she would a child.

Her attitude was born of love. But her husband died in perhaps the deepest purgatory through which any man can pass on earth.

THE WAGES of sin are sickness and death. They are indeed, as countless medical men will testify.

Money hunger and the sins committed to get money; sex hunger and the sins committed to secure satisfaction; ambitions for which men sell their souls; social hunger, which so often makes women do anything for clothes and show—these are the chief causes of many a sickness, many a death.

Even the sinless are not wholly exempt from soul sickness. I have in mind the case of a man of more than usual fineness of character, a robust outdoor man, who left his office one day, went to the hospital for a minor operation—and died within 24 hours.

The operating surgeon was naturally stunned at this unexpected development. But I had good reason to believe that Fred had died for reasons not primarily connected with the operation, which was such a minor one that only a local anesthetic was needed.

A FEW DAYS before, Fred had come to me in an anxious frame of mind. He blurted out a question that led to a long discussion of ethics. Fred cited a hypothetical case involving the "handling" of a boss. It simmered down to the questions: "Does honestly always pay? Is truth always wise?"

Fred was the soul of honor; nevertheless, I realized that this case he had propounded was by no means hypothetical. It was not a friend, but his own soul that he had placed on trial. Two days later he went to the hospital; the next day he was dead.

He had not been happy in his work. One of his closest office associates told me that he was a square peg in a round hole in that shop. It had preyed on his mind.

Fearing another failure—for he had failed in another job not long before—Fred had "gone into himself." And to make things a hundred times worse, Fred's wife was one of those rare human beings, met more frequently among men than women, to whom dollars flow like iron filings to a magnet.

She had been an outstanding success before Fred knew her. She loved him and endeavored to minimize every contrast between them. She was wondrously kind to him.

But there was Fred, wedded to a woman recognized as a great success in the very work at which he was not a success. He began to break under the strain. A minor organic trouble came, and he died.

I DO NOT mean that all sickness can be traced back to some soul cause. What I am trying to make clear is that minds do succumb and bodies grow sick and die because of burdens borne by the soul.

The soul transmits the sorrow, the regret, whatever it is, to the mind. The mind cannot forget it. The thought returns to the trouble even when the patient should sleep.

Soon he suffers from insomnia; malaise develops; appetite suffers. Next comes malnutrition. The body's resistance to infection is lowered.

Along comes a microbe, and a chronic wasting disease sets in. The poisons enter the bloodstream and act upon the mind; and the vicious circle is complete.

The symptoms may be radically different in different individuals, but the usual common denominator is loss of appetite and some form of continual sleeplessness, extreme nervousness, and out-of-character irritability are other symptoms.

Fortunately, most of us do not find ourselves in such tragic circumstances. But all of us, as we grow older, are in danger of falling into one or more of the mental states already mentioned.

Loneliness, for instance. That is as much a spiritual state as a mental one.

In extreme cases, no one can do anything about it but the individual himself.

That he can do something about it, and often does, is the bright side of the picture, because it shows that a well soul is just as helpful as a sick one is hurtful.

The man who conquers lonesomeness has not only saved his soul but has been saved by it.

Opening the Door

There is a door to peace on earth . . . And one that leads to war . . . And though they may be locked, there is . . . A key to either door . . . Of course we must select with care . . . The portal and the key . . . And our success depends upon . . . Our world diplomacy . . . But that is not an easy task . . . For anyone to do . . . Especially when there are some . . . Who take a different view . . . The ones who will not arbitrate . . . And try to compromise . . . And whose designing promises . . . Are nothing more than lies . . . So let us speak with caution when . . . Our differences are aired . . . And let us slowly analyze . . . And always be prepared.

'Man of Vision' Tackles Transit Problems

Capital Transit is in another of its periodic financial stews.

Rising operating costs make it necessary to raise fares and reduce service, they say. But higher fares mean fewer passengers, and fewer passengers are likely to yield less revenue, instead of more.

Obviously, the company needs a man of vision (like me) to put them back on the road to fiscal success. Modern times call for modern methods.

In the back end of every streetcar, I would install a lending library, snack bar and popcorn machine. It's the only way to get people to move to the rear of the car and make room for more customers up front.

Besides, these sidelines would make more money than the parent company. Look what popcorn did for the movie industry.

Another way to bring back profits is to utilize operating personnel efficiently. At present, streetcar and bus operators do nothing except drive the vehicle, sell tokens and passes, make change, issue transfers and answer foolish questions.

These men should be kept busy. For example, they might serve as baby-sitters.

For the small sum of one token per child per round trip, mothers could leave their children with the motorman.

Any mother who failed to claim her child after one time around the line would be charged an extra token for each additional trip. Children unclaimed after 30 days would be held in the "will call" and incur demurrage at the rate of 50 cents a day.

And think of the revenue that would come rolling in from such extra services as bottle feeding and lullaby crooning (with Transit Radio supplying the musical accompaniment).

Or, as George F. Bowerman suggested in a letter to the editor the other day, why not rent out sound-proof earmuffs to those who don't like Trans-it Radio? The company would make a double profit from its music.

These are just a few of the many ways in which Capital Transit can improve its lot. But I'm not going to worry any more about helping them until they show a little ingenuity on their own hook.

REMEMBER THIS ON NEW YEAR'S EVE

James Reid of 4819 N. Capitol st. nw. is puzzled by the tavern sign which says: "Mixed Drinks —Wine and Beer." Asks Jimmy, who is 13 years old and has only a hearsay knowledge of these things:

"Isn't that a rather dangerous combination?"

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

Perhaps it will give you a little personal satisfaction to know how effective your Give-Aways items are.

I thought I'd get my wife a kitten for Christmas. So several days ago I started calling the numbers which offered kittens. But in each case the answer was the same—"I'm sorry, sir, but the kittens have all been taken."

So we're still without a kitten, but I can see what fine work these listings are doing in providing good homes for so many surplus pets. Keep up the good work. George H. Jones 1414 V st. se.

Dear George:

You are one man in a thousand.

I've received many letters that began like yours. In some, the first two paragraphs were almost identical.

But the third paragraph marks you as a man of distinction. You refrained from asking, "Won't you please tip us off beforehand so that we can get one?"

I hate to say "no" to folks who want to give a pet a good home, but it just isn't fair to give anybody an advantage.

So I never give out advance information. Absolutely never. Except to kids, nice old ladies, nice young ladies, people with hard luck stories, and people who won't take "no" for an answer.

They make me ashamed of myself for abandoning my principles; so I thank you for not being one of them. Bill

DON'T HOLD YOUR BREATH

First General Eisenhower eliminated himself as a Presidential possibility, and now Governor Dewey says he won't run, either.

The minute Harry Truman follows suit, I'm throwing my hat in the ring. If nobody else wants the job, I'll take it.

There's not much chance for advancement, but the pay isn't bad.

TAKE YOUR CHOICE

Latest Nielson radio survey shows Lux Radio Theater in first place throughout the Nation, with a rating of 26. Jack Benny is in second place, with 22.

Latest Hooper rating puts Jack Benny in first place with a rating of 26. Lux Radio Theater is second, with 22.

YOUNG AMERICA

A 13-year-old relative of mine protests that I was too harsh in my report of the young lady who sat behind us at the Capitol Theater when we saw "Ambush."

He points out that she did get off one good wisecrack.

In a scene near the end of the picture, the ambush of Federal troops has just been completed. The soldiers are wiped out; the Indians grab every available horse and scram, because more soldiers are coming up at a dead gallop.

But the Indian chief is left behind without a mount. Trapped, and a fair target for the onrushing Federals, he looks wildly about for a means of escape—and it was at that point that the girl behind us sighed:

"That's the way it always is. When you want one, there isn't a taxi in sight."

Merry-Go-Round

Johnson, Acheson Cool Off Tempers

By Drew Pearson

Here is the inside story of reports of friction between two of the most potent Truman Cabinet members—Secretary of State Dean Acheson and Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson.

Pearson

Actually there have been differences of opinion between them on three important policies, but both men are now leaning over backward to get along with each other. The three policies are:

1. Sending a steel mill to Yugoslavia, which Johnson opposed but Acheson favored
2. Occupying Formosa with U. S. troops, which Johnson favored but Acheson opposed;
3. General American policy in the Far East, where Johnson believes the United States should have vigorously supported Chiang Kai-shek.

Acheson has particularly resented Johnson's barging into the Far Eastern situation; and the belief has been expressed around the State Department that Johnson's interferences could not be entirely divorced from his law firm, which once represented the brothers-in-law of Chiang Kai-shek and the Soong dynasty.

Argument Over Airplanes

One small part of the Johnson-Acheson irritation came when the Secretary of Defense balked at giving the Secretary of State a special White House plane to fly to the Big Three Foreign Ministers' Conference last November.

Acheson wanted the Dew-Drop, the de luxe liner that the Air Force had built for "President" Dewey. But Johnson refused on the ground that the President's special plane, the Independence, was en route to Iran to bring back the Shah, and that Mr. Truman wanted the Dew-Drop kept in the United States in case of emergency.

Johnson offered his Cabinet colleague the President's onetime plane, the Sacred Cow, but the Sacred Cow does not make as much speed as the Independence or the Dew-Drop. So, without arguing any further with the Secretary of Defense, the Secretary of State quietly rented a special plane from American Airlines.

This cost the taxpayer about $12,000, and it was the first time a Cabinet member had rented a special plane, since Air Force planes are available at considerably less cost.

Winchell Starts Something

Shortly after Acheson returned from Europe, Walter Winchell broadcast an item that Washington in 1950 would not be big enough for both Acheson and Johnson.

Acheson didn't know anything about the broadcast—until 9 a. m. next day, when he got a phone call from Johnson asking if he could come over to see him right away. Acheson agreed; and Johnson, arriving a few minutes later, asked:

"Did you hear what Walter Winchell said last night?"

Acheson hadn't, but thought it was interesting that the Secretary of Defense should go to so much trouble to say that he had nothing to do with inspiring the broadcast.

Johnson, in his zeal to get things done, doesn't always clear his appointments with either the Democratic National Committee or the White House secretariat.

Result has been a steady trickle of well-placed anti-Johnson venom in the President's ear.

Correction: A recent column may have been unfair to Stephen Downey of Sacramento in linking him with his brother, Senator Sheridan Downey of California. The fact that Stephen Downey is an able liberal; and unlike his senatorial brother, fights for his convictions.
